THE ARMY OF GEN. ROSECRANS.

REBEL REPORTS OF THE SITUATION

Rosecrans and Bragg Confronting Each Other, and Both Armies Fortifying.

THE PROSPECTS ON BOTH SIDES

The Capture of Rosecrans a Hard Job.

"Loose Telegrams from Irresponsible Rebels."

REBEL RUMORS CONCERNING BURNSIDE.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 5.

A letter from Dalton, Ga., Sept. 26, published in the Richmond Dispatch on Saturday, says:

"The over-sanguine multitude will be somewhat disappointed to know that the chances of Gen. BRAGG taking Gen. ROSECRANS' army is no easy job. Although his losses have been heavy, he yet has a very formidable army."

The two armies were still confronting each other at last accounts at Chattanooga. ROSECRANS, it is said, has established three lines in front of the town, and it is also reported that BRAGG is fortifying Missionary Ridge.

The Examiner of Oct. 2, has the following:

ATLANTA, Ga., Wednesday, Sept. 30.

Trains have arrived here from Chickamauga Station, bringing such of our wounded as will bear removal. About 2,500 remain in the field hospitals who are too severely wounded to endure transportation.

A report reached Dalton yesterday that Gen. SAMUEL JONES occupied Knoxville, and that Gen. BURNSIDE retreated toward Cumberland Gap.

The Examiner says, editorially:

"There is no fighting at Chattanooga. Loose telegrams, from irresponsible parties, would have us believe that BRAGG had cut ROSECRANS' communications—holding Lookout Mountain, the road to Nashville, &c. But from BRAGG's failure to resume the offensive, we fear there is too much truth in ROSECRANS' dispatch to his Government, that he held an 'impregnable position.'

It is said BURNSIDE has succeeded in reinforcing him, and we have no reason to doubt it. BURNSIDE left JONES' front long enough ago to have accomplished the march."

PHILADELPHIA, Monday, Oct. 5.

A special dispatch from Knoxville, Tenn., to the Bulletin, says Gen. CARTER has taken position at Bull's Gap. The rebels hold Greenville, strongly reinforced. BAYARD and WOOLFORD are still in advance below Loudon, skirmishing with the rebel cavalry.

The rebel attack on McMinnville indicates a formidable flank movement to cut ROSECRANS' lines and isolate BURNSIDE.

On the 28th ult. the rebels attacked our right and were repulsed after a fight of two hours.

A large number of rebels were taken prisoners. They express mortification at the result of the Chickamauga battle, their losses far exceeding ours.

Two rebel divisions were reported at Harrison's Landing, on the Tennessee. Rebel cavalry was detached in an effort to cross the river on the 30th, but were driven back.

RUMORS FROM NASHVILLE.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Monday, Oct. 5.

An unusual degree of excitement prevails here to-day in consequence of the rebel Gen. FORREST, with a force of about 4,000 mounted men, having made a raid on our line of railroad communicating between this place and Bridgeport or Chattanooga.

To-day skirmishing has been going on in the neighborhood of Murfreesboro. The enemy made an attempt to destroy a bridge of considerable importance to us in a railroad point of view. In the skirmish very few were wounded, and none were killed that I can hear of.

Some persons are inclined to think that an engagement is going on at Chattanooga, because the enemy is thus operating in the rear of Gen. ROSECRANS.

Special Correspondence of the Commercial Advertiser.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Oct. 4.

THE SITUATION IN TENNESSEE.

Telegraphic communication direct with Gen. ROSECRANS' headquarters has been established with Washington, so the President and Gen. HALLECK can know almost hourly the condition of the situation in and about Chattanooga. It seems that the reinforcements ordered from so many quarters did not reach Gen. ROSECRANS as soon as many anticipated, but he telegraphs at last that large numbers of troops have now joined him.

THE LOWER MISSISSIPPI.

News from Vicksburgh—Affairs in Mississippi—Gen. Grant Again in the Saddle—The Expedition to Texas—Operations in Louisiana.

CAIRO, Sunday, Oct. 4.

The hospital boat R. C. Wood, from Vicksburg 28th, has arrived. She brought up 418 sick and convalescent soldiers. She left them at Memphis and took on 387 others there, which she takes to St. Louis.

Part of the crew of the Robert Campbell have arrived, who represent the loss of life at the burning of that steamer at forty.

CAIRO, Monday, Oct. 5.

H. D. GULLY, of Kemper County, Miss., has announced himself as a candidate for Representative on the reconstruction platform.

Vicksburgh dates of the 25th ult. say that the Texas expedition has exploded.

The railroad from Vicksburgh to Jackson is to be rebuilt. No movement from Vicksburgh will be made very soon. Gen. LOGAN has taken command of the city, and closed all places of business. There is a great want of fuel for the transports at Vicksburgh. A flag of truce, under Col. COLBAUGH, left for Dixie on the 25th.

Gen. GRANT rode out for the first time the same day.

Prominent citizens of Mobile report that there will not be much resistance offered at that place.

Advices from New-Orleans to the 20th have been received.

Matters were evidently drawing to a crisis. On the western side of the Mississippi were the Thirteenth and Nineteenth corps, except Gen. HERRON's division, which had been removed to Brashear City. One corps will move further West, while the other moves North to cooperate with Gen. HERRON, who has been after DICK TAYLOR on the Red River.

Gen. BANKS, it is said, takes the field in person. Gen. FRANKLIN is in command of the Nineteenth corps. Gen. HERRON's headquarters are on the Atchafalaya.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC.

Repulse of the Rebels at Germanna Ford.

A Foraging Party Fired upon by Artillery.

The Rebel Intrenchments on the Rapidan.

Guerrillas Still Infesting the South Side of the Potomac.

SPECIAL DISPATCH FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 5.

A day or two ago the rebels made a vigorous attempt to cross the river at Germanna Mills, with a force of six hundred infantry as a storming party. One hundred of Gen. BUFORD's dismounted cavalry, who were on picket duty at that point, kept the enemy at bay, and finally repulsed them with severe loss.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 5.

Yesterday morning, as some of our teamsters were foraging near the Rapidan, north of Clarke Mountain, one of the enemy's intrenched batteries fired seven shots at them. The rebels had previously given our pickets notice that they should do so if they repeated the act. No one was injured.

A rebel brigade occupies a strong position north of the Rapidan, near the railroad, a short distance from our lines. The road is in good order between the two lines.

Guerrillas still infest the southern side of the Potomac. Some of their raids and captures, it is known, might be prevented, if our troops were more watchful of the enemy's movements. Severe penalties are the result of their fancied security.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

CULPEPPER COURT-HOUSE, Friday, Oct. 2, 1863.

Down at the fords on the Rapidan the army of Gen. LEE is busy throwing up more intrenchments, thereby adding to the strength of an already very strong position. As Nature, in constructing this region, placed the hills on the southern bank of the river and the plains on the northern, it is easy to perceive that the advantage of ground is with the rebels. At Raccoon, Somerville and Roberson Fords, rifle pits and epaulments—as the earthen covers for field pieces are called—command all approaches. They have at Somerville Ford two tiers of rifle pits in straight and cremellaire lines, and earthworks behind and above these, to cover their heavy guns, the nature of the ground giving them the power to sweep the approach by the opposite plain with a heavy enfilading fire. Their position is now infinitely stronger than when KILPATRICK attacked them in it three weeks ago. Gen. EARLY's forces are stationed here, and are confronted on our side by Gen. WEED's brigade of the corps commanded by Gen. WARREN.

Between these troops picket firing has entirely ceased, and at short musket range, both parties lounge, cook or work, unmolested. The rebels have even mounted a battle-flag upon the rampart of their first tier of rifle-pits—one of the old red banners with a blue cross on it.

The only exception to this condition of affairs is made when any of our troops endeavor to occupy a house and outbuildings on a knoll commanding parts of their defences. This at once draws fire, although as long as corn, cabbages and potatoes existed in the garden, the soldiers would go there. Nothing can be done on our side—except in dark ness or fog—unseen by the enemy, whose signal officers high up on Clark's Mountain have pitched their little white tent, in a most commanding spot, for overlooking the movements of our army. In the meantime the pickets indulge in the usual badinage of the outposts. One—a Louisianian—asked why we did not throw up some rifle-pits. The answer was, "What for?" "Why, because we might come over and attack you." "Oh, is that all?" was the sentry's answer; "come along; we wouldn't throw anything in your way; it's what we want. Come over and bring all your friends; we shall not stop you. Did you throw up that dirt to prevent our advance? Oh, psha! when we advance we'll walk right around them." One of the rebel artillerymen was anxious to know whether a soldier's pay was good for anything now. He was told that it would buy thirteen dollars' worth of goods, the same as ever. "Well," said he, "I'll tell you what we do with ours. We tell off the battery into fives and play poker till one man out of five gets the money. The winners tell off into fives again, and so at last somebody has enough money to treat his friends." Gen. EARLY's headquarters are in a white house near the ford. His portly form, in white shirt, and an enormously high-crowned hat, with a feather, is occasionally seen about the opposite shore. It is stated on the authority of a Sergeant, who was down at the river bank arranging a little matter, in which coffee, tobacco and a Richmond Examiner figured prominently, that the General himself came down and made this offer: "If any of you Yanks want to trade a first-rate pair of high boots, good leather, and so forth, I'll pay for them in gold." Whether he has yet achieved the boots, is a matter upon which no testimony has been offered.

The commandant of the Second corps, Gen. WARREN, was presented with a sword the day before yesterday, as a testimonial of regard from the citizens of his native town, Clear Spring, N. Y. The larger portion of the subscribers are personal friends of the General, and he was visibly affected by their thoughtfulness. Gen. MEADE and many other Generals were present. No one has more admirers than Gen. WARREN, and hundreds of officers from every corps in the army came to offer their congratulations. The General's speech in acceptance of the sword was modest and appropriate, and not at all political. J.

THE WAR IN THE SOUTHWEST.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION CAVALRY, NEAR DUNLAP, Oct. 3.

Col. EDWARD McCOOK, with the First Missouri and Second Indiana cavalry, attacked WHEELER's force, 4,000 strong, at Anderson's Cross Roads, yesterday, and whipped them badly, killing and wounding 120, taking 87 prisoners, and recapturing all the Government property, including 800 mules, and the prisoners taken from our train. Among the prisoners is a Major on WHEELER's Staff, commander of the escort, a Major on Gen. MARTIN's Staff, Col. RUSSELL, commanding a brigade, and nine other officers. The enemy was completely routed, and driven ten miles.

GEN. LEE'S OFFICIAL REPORT OF HIS

Campaign in Pennsylvania and Maryland.

The official report of Gen. LEE of his campaign in Maryland and Pennsylvania, in June and July, was published in the Richmond papers of Saturday last, and it is, says the Richmond Examiner, "the first official report of Gen. LEE's many military operations which the public has been permitted to see." It clears up several points which have heretofore been but little understood, but leaves untouched many of the most interesting problems connected with the Northern invasion. As the rebel commander's view of that campaign, it is deeply interesting, especially as this is the first official report of it we have had, Gen. MEADE's not yet having been published:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY NORTHERN VIRGINIA, July 31, 1863.

GENERAL: I have the honor to submit the following outline of the recent operations of this army for the information of the Department:

The position occupied by the enemy opposite Fredericksburgh being one in which he could not be attacked to advantage, it was determined to draw him from it. The execution of this purpose embraced the relief of the Shenandoah Valley from the troops that had occupied the lower part of it during the Winter and Spring, and, if practicable, the transfer of the scene of hostilities north of the Potomac.

It was thought that the corresponding movement on the part of the enemy, to which those contemplated by us could probably give rise, might offer a fair opportunity to strike a blow at the army therein commanded by Gen. HOOKER, and that, in any event, that army would be compelled to leave Virginia, and possibly to draw to its support troops designed to operate against other parts of the country. In this way, it was supposed that the enemy's plan of campaign for the Summer would be broken up, and part of the season of active operations be consumed in the formation of new combinations and the preparations that they would require.

In addition to these advantages, it was hoped that other valuable results might be attained by military success.

Actuated by these and other important considerations that may hereafter be presented, the movement began on the 3d of June. McLAWS' division, of LONGSTREET's corps, left Fredericksburgh for Culpepper Court-house, and HOOD's division, which was encamped on the Rapidan, marched to the same place.

They were followed on the 4th and 5th by EWELL's corps, leaving that of A. P. HILL to occupy our lines at Fredericksburgh.

The march of these troops having been discovered by the enemy on the afternoon of the 5th, the following day he crossed a force, amounting to about one army corps, to the south side of the Rappahannock, on a pontoon bridge laid down near the mouth of Deep Run. Gen. HILL disposed his command to resist their advance; but as they seemed intended for the purpose of observation rather than attack, the movements in progress were not arrested.

The forces of LONGSTREET and EWELL reached Culpepper Court-house by the 8th, at which point the cavalry, under Gen. STUART, was also concentrated.

On the 9th a large force of Federal cavalry, strongly supported by infantry, crossed the Rappahannock at Beverley's and Kelley's Fords, and attacked Gen. STUART. A severe engagement ensued, continuing from early in the morning until late in the afternoon, when the enemy was forced to recross the river with heavy loss, leaving 400 prisoners, three pieces of artillery and several colors in our hands.

Gen. JENKINS, with his cavalry brigade, had been ordered to advance toward Winchester to cooperate with the infantry in the proposed expedition into the Lower Valley, and at the same time Gen. IMBODEN was directed, with his command, to make a demonstration in the direction of Romney, in order to cover the movement against Winchester, and prevent the enemy at that place from being reinforced by the troops on the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. Both of these officers were in position when Gen. EWELL left Culpepper Court-house on the 10th. Crossing the Shenandoah near Front Royal, he detached RODES' division to Berryville, with instructions, after dislodging the force stationed there, to cut off communication between Winchester and the Potomac. With the divisions of EARLY and JOHNSON, Gen. EWELL advanced directly upon Winchester, driving the enemy into his works around the town on the 13th. On the same day the troops at Berryville fell back before Gen. RODES, retreating to Winchester. On the 14th Gen. EARLY stormed the works at the latter place, and the whole army of Gen. MILROY was captured or dispersed. Most of those who attempted to escape were interrupted and made prisoners by Gen. JOHNSON. Their leader fled to Harper's Ferry with a small party of fugitives.

Gen. RODES marched from Berryville to Martinsburgh, entering the latter place on the 14th, where he took 700 prisoners, five pieces of artillery and a considerable quantity of stores. These operations cleared the Valley of the enemy, those at Harper's Ferry withdrawing to Maryland Heights. More than 4,000 prisoners, 29 pieces of artillery, 270 wagons and ambulances, with 400 horses, were captured, besides a large amount of military stores. Our loss was small. On the night that EWELL appeared at Winchester, the Federal troops in front of A. P. HILL, at Fredericksburgh, recrossed the Rappahannock and the next day disappeared behind the hills of Stafford.

The whole army of Gen. HOOKER withdrew from the line of the Rappahannock, pursuing the roads near the Potomac, and no favorable opportunity was offered for attack. It seemed to be the purpose of Gen. HOOKER to take a position which would enable him to cover the approaches to Washington City; with a view to draw him further from his base, and, at the same time, to cover the march of A. P. HILL, who, in accordance with instructions, left Fredericksburgh for the Valley as soon as the enemy withdrew from his front. LONGSTREET moved from Culpepper Court House on the 15th, and advancing along the east side of the Blue Ridge, occupied Ashby's and Snicker's gaps. His force had been augmented while at Culpepper by Gen. PICKETT with three brigades of his division.

The cavalry under Gen. STUART, was thrown out in front of LONGSTREET to watch the enemy, now reported to be moving into Loudon. On the 17th his cavalry encountered two brigades of ours, under Gen. STUART, near Aldie, and was driven back with loss. The next day the engagement was renewed, the Federal cavalry being strongly supported by infantry, and Gen. STUART was, in turn, compelled to retire.

The enemy advanced as far as Upperville and then fell back. In these engagements Gen. STUART took about four hundred prisoners and a considerable number of horses and arms.

In the meantime, a part of Gen. EWELL's corps had entered Maryland, and the rest was about to follow. Gen. JENKINS, with his cavalry, who accompanied Gen. EWELL, penetrated Pennsylvania as far as Chambersburgh. As these demonstrations did not have the effect of causing the Federal army to leave Virginia, and as it did not seem disposed to advance upon the position held by LONGSTREET, the latter was withdrawn to the west side of the Shenandoah, Gen. HILL having already reached the Valley.

Gen. STUART was left to guard the passes of the mountains and observe the movements of the enemy, whom he was instructed to harass and impede as much as possible, should he attempt to cross the Potomac. In that event Gen. STUART was directed to move into Maryland, crossing the Potomac east or west of the Blue Ridge, as in his judgment should be best, and take position on the right of our column as it advanced.

By the 24th the progress of EWELL rendered it necessary that the rest of the army should be in supporting distance, and LONGSTREET and HILL marched to the Potomac. The former crossed at Williamsport, and the latter at Shepardstown. The columns reunited at Hagerstown, and advanced thence into Pennsylvania, encamping near Chambersburgh on the 27th.

No report had been received that the Federal army had crossed the Potomac, and the absence of the cavalry rendered it impossible to obtain accurate information. In order, however, to retain it on the east side of the mountains after it should enter Maryland, and thus leave open our communication with the Potomac, through Hagerstown and Williamsport, Gen. EWELL has been instructed to send a division eastward from Chambersburgh to cross the South Mountains. EARLY's division was detached for this purpose, and proceeded as far east as York, while the remainder of the corps proceeded to Carlisle.

Gen. IMBODEN, in pursuance of the instructions previously referred to, had been actively engaged on the left of Gen. EWELL during the progress of the latter into Maryland. He had driven off the forces guarding the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, destroying all the important bridges on that route from Cumberland to Martinsburgh, and seriously damaged the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal.

He subsequently took position at Hancock, and after the arrival of LONGSTREET and HILL at Chambersburgh was directed to march by way of McConnellsburgh to that place.

Preparations were now made to advance upon Harrisburg; but on the night of the 29th information was received from a scout that the Federal army, having crossed the Potomac, was advancing northwards, and that the head of the column had reached the South Mountain. As our communications with the Potomac were thus menaced, it was resolved to prevent his further progress in that direction by concentrating our army on the east side of the mountains. Accordingly, LONGSTREET and HILL were directed to proceed from Chambersburg to Gettysburg, to which point Gen. Ewell was also instructed to march from Carlisle.

Gen. STUART continued to follow the movements of the Federal army south of the Potomac after our own had entered Maryland, and, in his efforts to impede its progress, advanced as far eastward as Fairfax Court-house. Finding himself unable to delay the enemy materially, he crossed the river at Seneca and marched through Westminster to Carlisle, where he arrived after Gen. EWELL had left for Gettysburgh. By the route he pursued the Federal army was interposed between his command and our main body, preventing any communication with him until his arrival at Carlisle.

The march toward Gettysburg was conducted more slowly than it would have been had the movements of the Federal army been known.

The leading division of Hill met the enemy in advance at Gettysburgh on the morning of the 1st of July. Driving back these troops to within a short distance of the town, he there encountered a large force, with which two of his divisions became engaged. EWELL, coming up with two of his divisions by the Heidlersburgh road, joined in the engagement. The enemy was driven through Gettysburgh with heavy loss, including about five thousand prisoners and several pieces of artillery.

He retreated to a high range of hills south and east of the town. The attack was not pressed that afternoon, the enemy's force being unknown, and it being considered advisable to await the arrival of the rest of our troops. Orders were sent back to hasten their march; and, in the meantime, every effort was made to ascertain the numbers and position of the enemy, and find the most favorable point of attack. It had not been intended to fight a general battle at such a distance from our base, unless attacked by the enemy; but, finding ourselves unexpectedly confronted by the Federal army, it became a matter of difficulty to withdraw through the mountains with our large trains. At the same time the country was unfavorable for collecting supplies while in the presence of the enemy's main body, as he was enabled to restrain our foraging parties by occupying the passes of the mountains with regular and local troops. A battle thus became, in a measure, unavoidable. Encouraged by the successful issue of the engagement of the first day, and in view of the valuable results that would ensue from the defeat of the army of Gen. MEADE, it was thought advisable to renew the attack.

The remainder of EWELL's and HILL's corps having arrived, and two divisions of LONGSTREET's, our preparations were made accordingly. During the afternoon intelligence was received of the arrival of Gen. STUART at Carlyle, and he was ordered to march to Gettysburgh, and take position on the left. A full account of these engagements cannot be given until the reports of the several commanding officers shall have been received, and I shall only offer a general description.

The preparations for attack were not completed until the afternoon of the 2d.

The enemy held a high and commanding ridge, along which he had massed a large amount of artillery. Gen. EWELL occupied the left of our line, Gen. HILL the centre, and Gen. LONGSTREET the right. In front of Gen. LONGSTREET the enemy held a position, from which, if he could be driven, it was thought that our army could be used to advantage in assailing the more elevated ground beyond, and thus enable us to reach the crest of the ridge. That officer was directed to endeavor to carry this position, while Gen. EWELL attacked directly the high ground on the enemy's right, which had already been partially fortified. Gen. HILL was instructed to threaten the centre of the Federal line, in order to prevent reinforcements being sent to either wing, and to avail himself of any opportunity that might present itself to attack.

After a severe struggle LONGSTREET succeeded in getting possession of and holding the desired ground. EWELL also carried some of the strong positions which he assailed, and the result was such as to lead to the belief that he would ultimately be able to dislodge the enemy. The battle ceased at dark.

These partial successes determined me to continue the assault next day. PICKETT, with three of his brigades, joined LONGSTREET the following morning, and our batteries were moved forward to the position gained by him the day before.

The general plan of attack was unchanged, except that one division and two brigades of HILL's corps were ordered to support LONGSTREET.

The enemy, in the meantime, had strengthened his line with earthworks. The morning was occupied in necessary preparations, and the battle recommenced in the afternoon of the 3d, and raged with great violence until sunset. Our troops succeeded in entering the advanced works of the enemy, and getting possession of some of his batteries; but our artillery having nearly expended its ammunition, the attacking columns became exposed to the heavy fire of the numerous batteries near the summit of the ridge, and, after a most determined and gallant struggle, were compelled to relinquish their advantage, and fall back to their original positions, with severe loss.

The conduct of the troops was all that I could desire or expect, and they deserved success so far as it can be deserved by heroic valor and fortitude. More may have been required of them than they were able to perform, but my admiration of their noble qualities, and confidence in their ability to cope successfully with the enemy, has suffered no abatement from the issue of this protracted and sanguinary conflict.

Owing to the strength of the enemy's position and the reduction of our ammunition, a renewal of the engagement could not be hazarded, and the difficulty of procuring supplies rendered it impossible to continue longer where we were. Such of the wounded as were in condition to be removed, and part of the arms collected on the field, were ordered to Williamsport. The army remained at Gettysburgh during the 4th, and at night began to retire by the road to Fairfield, carrying with it about 4,000 prisoners. Nearly 2,000 had previously been paroled, but the enemy's numerous wounded, that had fallen into our hands after the first and second days' engagements, were left behind.

Little progress was made that night, owing to a severe storm, which greatly embarrassed our movements. The rear of the column did not leave its position near Gettysburgh until after daylight on the 5th.

The march was continued during that day without interruption by the enemy, except an unimportant demonstration upon our rear in the afternoon, when near Fairfield, which was easily checked. Part of our train moved by the road through Fairfield, and the rest by the way of Cashtown, guarded by Gen. IMBODEN. In passing through the mountains, in advance of the column, the great length of the trains exposed them to attack by the enemy's cavalry, which captured a number of wagons and ambulances; but they succeeded in reaching Williamsport without serious loss.

They were attacked at that place on the 6th by the enemy's cavalry, which was gallantly repulsed by Gen. IMBODEN. The attacking force was successively encountered and driven off by Gen. STUART, and pursued for several miles in the direction of Hagerstown. The army, after an arduous march, rendered more difficult by the rains, reached Hagerstown on the afternoon of the 6th and morning of the 7th July.

The Potomac was found to be so much swollen by the rains that had fallen almost incessantly since our entrance into Maryland as to be unfordable. Our communications with the south side were thus interrupted, and it was difficult to procure the ammunition or subsistence, the latter difficulty being enhanced by the high waters impeding the working of neighboring mills. The trains with the wounded and prisoners were compelled to await at Williamsport the subsiding of the river and the construction of boats, as the pontoon-bridge left at Falling Waters had been partially destroyed. The enemy had not yet made his appearance; but, as he was in condition to obtain large reinforcements, and our situation, for the reasons above mentioned, was becoming daily more embarrassing, it was deemed advisable to recross the river. Part of the pontoon-bridge was recovered, and new boats built, so that by the 13th a good bridge was thrown over the river at Falling waters.

The enemy in force reached our front on the 12th. A position had been previously selected to cover the Potomac from Williamsport to Falling Waters, and an attack was awaited during that and the succeeding day. This did not take place, though the two armies were in close proximity, the enemy being occupied in fortifying his own lines. Our preparations being completed, and the river, though still deep, being pronounced fordable, the army commenced to withdraw to the south side on the night of the 13th.

EWELL's corps forded the river at Williamsport, those of LONGSTREET and HILL crossed upon the bridge. Owing to the condition of the roads the troops did not reach the bridge until after daylight of the 14th, and the crossing was not completed until 1 P. M., when the bridge was removed. The enemy offered no serious interruption, and the movement was attended with no loss of material except a few disabled wagons and two pieces of artillery, which the horses were unable to move through the deep mud. Before fresh horses could be sent back for them the rear of the column had passed.

During the slow and tedious march to the bridge, in the midst of a violent storm of rain, some of the men lay down by the way to rest. Officers sent back for them failed to find many in the obscurity of the night, and these, with some stragglers, fell into the hands of the enemy.

Brig.-Gen. PETTIGREW was mortally wounded in an attack made by a small body of cavalry, which was unfortunately mistaken for our own and permitted to enter our lines. He was brought to Bunker Hill, where he expired a few days afterward. He was a brave and accomplished officer and gentleman, and his loss will be deeply felt by the country and the army.

The following day the army marched to Bunker Hill, in the vicinity of which it encamped for several days. The day after its arrival a large force of the enemy's cavalry, which had crossed the Potomac at Harper's Ferry, advanced toward Martinsburgh. It was attacked by Gen. FITZ LEE, near Kearneysville, and defeated with heavy loss, leaving its dead and many of its wounded on the field.

Owing to the swollen condition of the Shenandoah River the plan of operations which had been contemplated when we recrossed the Potomac could not be put in execution, and before the water had subsided the movements of the enemy induced me to cross the Blue Ridge and take position south of the Rappahannock, which was accordingly done.

As soon as the reports of the commanding officers shall be received a more detailed account of their operation will be given, and occasion will then be taken to speak more particularly of the conspicuous gallantry and good conduct of both officers and men.

It is not in my power to give a correct statement of our casualities, which were severe, including many brave men and an unusual proportion of distinguished and valuable officers. Among them I regret to mention the following general officers: Major-Gens. HOOD, PENDER and TRIMBLE severely, and Major-Gen. HETH slightly wounded.

Gen. PENDER has since died. This lamented officer has borne a distinguished part in every engagement of this army, and was wounded on several occasions while leading his command with conspicuous gallantry and ability. The confidence and admiration inspired by his courage and capacity as an officer were only equaled by the esteem and respect entertained by all with whom he was associated for the noble qualities of his modest and unassuming character. Brig.-Gens. BARKSDALE and GARNETT were killed, and Brig.-Gen. SEMMES mortally wounded, while leading their troops with the courage that always distinguished them. These brave officers and patriotic gentlemen fell in the faithful discharge of duty, leaving the army to mourn their loss and emulate their noble examples.

Brig.-Gens. Kemper, Armistead, Scales, G. T. Anderson, Hampton, J. M. Jones and Jenkins were also wounded. Brig.-Gen. Archer was taken prisoner. Gen. Pettigrew, though wounded at Gettysburgh, continued in command until he was mortally wounded near Falling Waters.

The loss of the enemy is unknown, but from observation on the field, and his subsequent movements, it is supposed that he suffered severely.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed,) R. E. LEE, General.

The Glasgow with mails to the 19th has also arrived. The news by these arrivals is only one day later than that received by the Saxonia, vid Cape Race, but our files furnish us the following additional intelligence:

The steamship Sidon, which left Liverpool on the 22d ult. and Queenstown on the 23d, also arrived at this port last evening.

The screw steamer Harriet Pinckney, tender to the Alabama and Florida, entered the Mersey on Sept. 18 from St. George's, Bermuda, Aug. 30, with 1,038 bales of cotton, 167 boxes of tobacco and 46 casks of turpentine as cargo.

The France of Sept. 20 states that Mr. GLADSTONE was at Brest, and that he had paid a visit to the dockyard.

Capt. MAFFIT, the commander of the Florida, has been making a brief visit in Paris,

The British Channel fleet still remained at Liverpool. Among other ceremonies incidental to their visit had been a banquet to one thousand of the sailors in St. George's Hall, which passed off with great éclat. The Admiral and officers of the fleet had been honored with banquets, balls, &c., on the most magnificent scale.

Pro-Southern English journals begin to see signs of collapse in the South, even the Morning Herald admits that the last news shows the numerical weakness of the South is beginning seriously to affect the operations of her armies.

The Confederate loan had relapsed to 30@28 per cent. discount under the Jura's news.

It is reported that the new Mexican loan will be twenty or twenty-four millions sterling.

The Times editorially assumes that MAXIMILIAN will ascend the Mexican throne and that the British Government will acknowledge and favor the reorganization.

Denmark has taken preliminary steps toward placing the army on a war footing.

OUR FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.

LONDON, Saturday, Sept. 19, 1863.

There are some very curious matters connected with the Florida, now undergoing repairs in the French naval dockyard at Brest. The Moniteur, which at first called her a corsaire—privateer or pirate—has since declared that she is a regular man-of-war and entitled to all the privileges of such vessels, one of which is freedom from seizure on civil process. Any claim for damages committed by her must be brought against the Confederate Government.

But while the Florida is undergoing repairs at Brest, eighty of her crew, accompanied by an officer, have arrived at Cardiff, by a French steamer, and went on to Liverpool. What for? No one appears to know. The first idea of course was, to be transferred to the Laird iron clad rams. But it is said that these are positively to be detained until the Government knows more about them. The Liverpool Post says the Florida sailors have been discharged without pay, and are in distress. They have orders on the Confederate agents in Liverpool, but these have not been paid. Between the contradictory stories of the Federal and Confederate Liverpool papers, it is hard to get at the truth.

The recent news from America has sent the Confederate stock up three or four per cent., but a letter from Lieut. MAURY in this morning's Times is not likely to help it. It is a sad and bitter complaint, that the Federals, instead of meeting the Confederate armies in the field, have adopted the policy of desolating the country and destroying not only the actual property, but its future prospects. It is a complaint that will excite pity, no doubt; but it will also discourage assistance. To lay waste a country and make it desolate is one of the most common methods of war. Fortified towns are starved into submission, and countries are laid waste that armies cannot be fed. Many a great army has been compelled to withdraw or been destroyed by laying waste the country around it. War is war. It is essentially savage and murderous; and any attempt to make it otherwise must fail. No doubt, if the whole matter could be settled by a duel between Mr. LINCOLN and Mr. DAVIS, much suffering would be saved to both sides; but neither party would consent to such an arrangement.

Opinion here is becoming settled that the war will continue, with various complications, for several years. The letter of Mr. LINCOLN to the Illinois Convention has strengthened this growing belief.

This prospect is beginning to move the element of British philanthropy. Hitherto this has been enlisted on the side of the negroes, and has been consequently favorable to the North. Another movement has begun—one of sympathy with the helpless white population of the South. How strong it may become I cannot tell. It is to this feeling that Lieut. MAURY appeals in his letter this morning; and the Times backs him with a leader. Then will come a demand for intervention on the score of humanity, by a nation that has never hesitated to put down insurrection by fire and sword, massacre and extermination.

The reception given by the English Press to the idea of calling out and arming half a million of negroes in the South is very curious. The Abolition and Pro-Federal papers scout the idea as madness. They do not believe that the slaves, even if promised freedom, would fight for their masters. They have no idea but that the whole body of negroes, so armed, would turn their bayonets against those who had placed them in their hands. But the papers that are really Pro-Southern, but have been held in check by the Abolition sentiment, are exulting in this great movement in favor of Emancipation on the part of the Confederate Government. "Didn't we tell you so?" they ask. "Didn't we say that the Southerners would free their negroes if they were only left alone?" There are not a few who insist that Southern independence is the best thing that can happen for the negro, and that it was the power of the Union which kept him in slavery.

Under all these discussions there is one pervading feeling and hope—hatred of the American Union, and the hope that it will never be restored. This is the true feeling of four-fifths—perhaps nine-tenths of Englishmen.

A Mexican Embassy has gone to Trieste to wait upon the Emperor elect, MAXIMILIAN I., to lay at his august feet the formal tender of the Ancient Crown of the Montezumas. I judge from this that he has accepted, and there is little doubt that the matter was all settled months ago. But these formalities must be gone through with. It is only a ceremony, but then His Imperial Majesty is, possibly, only a ceremony himself. It is said that 8,000 Irishmen are to be enlisted to go to Mexico as a portion of the new Imperial army. Being Catholics, they will fraternize with the Mexicans; and being foreigners, they can be relied upon. Furthermore, it is imagined that Irish citizens of the United States will not like to go to Mexico to fight an army of their countrymen; but I should think the part taken by Irishmen in the civil war in America would be a sufficient answer to such a supposition. Irishmen have fought against Irishmen on the battle fields of Europe and America. Why not? Do not Americans fight with Americans? Did French spare French in La Vendée? The time may come, also, in the future, as it has been in the past, when English will fight English here on their own island home. It does not look likely to-day; but who of us expected, ten years ago, a bloody civil war in America?

The laws of neutrality are under discussion. The latest authoritative statement of the law, as laid down in the Supreme Court of the United States is, that neutrality consists, not in withholding aid from either party, but in giving to both alike, and with perfect impartiality. You have bought hundreds of thousands of rifles and parks of artillery in England—the Confederates are free to do the same. The Confederates have purchased ships-of-war—you can do so if you want them. It is free trade to both, with the risk of capture to both of all such contraband articles. But it is evident that the Government is not quite satisfied with this doctrine. England, as a naval Power, does not wish to establish the doctrine that other countries can buy war steamers wherever they can find them. It might, one of these days, work against her.

Diplomacy about Poland goes on, and so does the season. Nothing will be done—nothing can be done until Spring, and before that time Poland will be made as quiet as is necessary. It is a very paltry affair—scarcely equal to the border war of Missouri and Kansas. There are fights with guerrilla bands of three or four hundred, and it is said that the Russians, up to this time, have never used artillery against them.

The magnificent harvest is gathered. There are some bad reports about potatoes, but they are very cheap. The demand for foreign grain is not likely to be large. But if imports are small, exports, to America at least, must be in proportion; so it is as broad as it is long. Agriculture and commerce balance each other. Those who wish to sell must buy.

London is in its dullest season. The world is everywhere but here. Poverty, crime, misery, are here in abundance—but they have got used to it. The papers give their daily stories of starvation, infanticide, murder, robberies, with almost as much regularity as the flow of the tides. The only news of interest is from America. That begins to be the same thing over and over. MONADOCK.

A SPEECH BY W. E. FORSTER, M. P.

From the London Times, Sept. 23.

A crowded meeting was held on Monday night in the Music Hall at Leeds, in support of the cause of emancipation in America, and the neutral policy of the British Government. The presence of Mr. FORSTER, M. P., (who presided,) and of Rev. W. H. CHANNING, from the United States, imparted an additional interest to the proceedings, which were of the most unanimous and enthusiastic character. There were also present on the platform, Rev. G. W. Conder, Rev. John Adcock, Rev. George Mather, Dr. Greenhow, Mr. John Jowitt, Mr. Joseph Lupton, Mr. T. B Baines, Mr. Alderman Carter, Mr. Councilor Tatham, Mr. Councilor Nichols, Mr. W. Brown, Mr. Thompson, Mr. J. W. Smith, Mr. Harvey, Mr. David Green, Mr. J. Andrew, and many other friends of the slave.

Mr. J. LUPTON, in proposing that Mr. FORSTER should occupy the Chair, stated that but for another engagement the Mayor would have been present and occupied that position. [Applause.]

The Chairman was received with enthusiastic cheering, and after a few introductory remarks referring to the misunderstanding which existed upon the question of the present struggle, and of the fear that another evil might be added to it leading to a difference between England and America, he said: Just allow me to say one

GENERAL CITY NEWS.

AN EXTENSIVE THEFT—A COUNTRYMAN ROBBED BY A WOMAN.—At an early hour yesterday morning Mr. HIRAM S. TERRELL, of Danbury, Conn., made his appearance at Police Headquarters, where he stated that on Sunday he was robbed of about the sum of $15,000 in money and drafts by two women, whose names he gave as Mrs. LAURA and ROSA WELSH, both of whom, he said, reside at No. 12 Greene-street. Detective SLOWEY was at once dispatched in search of the guilty parties, and after much effort he succeeded in taking into custody Mrs. LAURA, (who gave her name as CAROLINE BUCKMAN,) ROSA WELSH and the housekeeper of the establishment, whose name is LEWIS SEYMOUR. They were all taken to Police Headquarters, and subsequently ROSA WALSH was arraigned before Justice DOWLING at the Essex Market Police Court. Mr. TERRELL there made an affidavit in which he claimed that he had lost only $6,450. The money consisted, he said, of a $1,000 Treasury note, one $50 Treasury note, two United States notes of $20 each; also, bank bills on various State banks for $300, four drafts of $1,000 each on the Pahquoe Bank, of Danbury, Conn., and one diamond ring, worth $160. Mr. TERRELL swears that on Sunday last he took a carriage at the Northern Hotel, in this City, where he was temporarily stopping, went up to Greene-street, where he secured a companion—ROSA WELSH—and with her he rode to Luff's Hotel, in Harlem-lane. Soon after reaching the latter place he discovered that all his money and drafts were gone. Mrs. LAURA, as the complainant alleges, came up in her carriage and took ROSA away. None of the money has been recovered. The accused were held for examination, which will take place on Wednesday morning, at the Essex Court.

A BOY PEPPERED TO DEATH—AN OUTRAGEOUS ASSAULT.—JOHN SNOOKS, a lad about 10 years of age, son of Mrs. SARAH A. SNOOKS, residing at No. 16½ Downing-street, died on Saturday last at the residence of his mother from the effects of injuries received under the following circumstances: On the 9th ultimo some difficulty occurred between the deceased and a son of Mrs. BRODERICK, when Mrs. B. and another woman seized deceased, threw him down, and rubbed a large quantity of red pepper in his mouth, eyes and nose. This had the effect to throw the boy into convulsions. He was taken to his home, where, after lingering in a delirious and wholly unconscious state for nine days, he died from the effects of the injuries received. Dr. JAMES W. PURDY, of No. 61 Macdougal-street, gave a burial certificate, without notifying the Coroner of the facts connected with the death of young SNOOKS. The mother of deceased yesterday made complaint against Mrs. BRODERICK. A warrant was granted, and Officer DAVIS took the accused into custody. She did not deny having used the pepper upon the eyes, nose and mouth of the boy, but said she merely wished to punish him. Justice KELLY committed her, in default of $2,000 bail, to answer an indictment of manslaughter.

THE ALLEGED ARSON CASE.—The charge of arson against WILSON, the proprietor of the Fulton-street Bakery, and others, was disposed of yesterday, by Justice DOWLING dismissing it as being utterly unsustained, and the witnesses making it entirely unreliable. The Justice stated that the examination had not left the least suspicion upon any of the defendants. Any one who read the testimony had come to the same conclusion that the Justice has announced. It was a bald, bungling attempt, and it is understood that on hearing a rumor that the charge was about to be made, Mr. WILSON was the most persistent in having it speedily made and thoroughly investigated.

DEATH OF AN OLD POLICE OFFICER.—JOHN K. SCOTT, for many years past a policeman attached to the Jefferson Market Police Court, died yesterday afternoon of consumption, after a short illness. Mr. SCOTT was well known in the Department as a faithful and efficient officer. He resided at No. 108 West Sixteenth-street, where he has left a wife but no children.

MEETING OF THE NATIONAL CANAL COMMITTEE.—The Executive Committee appointed at the Canal Convention, held at Chicago in June last, will meet at the St. Nicholas Hotel on Wednesday next, Oct. 7, at 3 P. M. The memorial to the President and Congress of the United States, prepared by the Sub-Committee, will be reported for consideration, and other matters of importance will be presented.

ON A STRIKE.—The coopers paraded the streets yesterday, with music and the Stars and Stripes. They turned out in formidable numbers—a strike for $2 50 per day being the cause of the demonstration.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

It is stated in a dispatch from Washington that ROSECRANS has at last been heavily reinforced. Communication between the Army of the Cumberland and Washington has been firmly established. On the 28th ult. the enemy attacked our left flank, but were repulsed, after a two hours' fight, with severe loss.

An expedition, under the command of Capt. KERR, of the Fifth Pennsylvania cavalry, returned to Norfolk on Oct. 2 from a scout on the Atlantic coast as far as the State line of North Carolina. Besides obtaining some important information, Capt. KERR destroyed four salt works that have been preparing that much-needed article for the rebels. It was only in June last that these works were demolished by Major MURRAY, of the One Hundred and Forty-eighth New-York, but since that time they have been rebuilt, and were in full operation. No guerrillas were seen, but it was ascertained that six small boats, filled with them, crossed Currituck Sound on Monday last.

Rebel accounts from Charleston confirm the reports that Gen. GILLMORE has again become actively aggressive. He opened a vigorous fire on the 1st inst. against Sumter with his 200-pounder Parrotts, and paid a passing compliment occasionally to the other rebel works. The result is not stated.

The Southern journals are not over-confident of BRAGG'S ability to vanquish ROSECRANS, and warn their readers to be less sanguine on the point. BRAGG is reported to be fortifying Missionary Ridge, and ROSECRANS is said to have established three lines in front of the town of Chattanooga. Such of the rebel wounded as would bear removal had been taken to Atlanta, Ga., but on the 30th ult. 2,500 yet remained in the field hospitals. The Richmond Examiner, of Saturday last, inclines to the belief that BURNSIDE has reinforced ROSECRANS, and scouts at the rumor that BRAGG had succeeded in cutting the communications of the Union army.

A cavalry fight occurred on Friday last, at Anderson's Cross Roads, Ky., between two regiments of Union cavalry under Col. EDWARD MCCOOK, and 4,000 rebel cavalry under WHEELER. The latter were badly beaten, losing 120 in killed and wounded and 87 prisoners, besides a quantity of property, including 809 mules, which had been recently captured from our forces.

IMBODEN recently made a descent upon the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, with the design of obstructing the passage of the reinforcements to ROSECRANS, but, sad to say, he was a day too late.

FROM EUROPE.

By the arrival at this port yesterday of the steamers City of London, Glasgow and Sidon, we have files of foreign journals to the 24th ult. The news is one day later than that brought by the Saxonia, and telegraphed from Cape Race. It is now positively asserted that MAXIMILIAN has accepted the Mexican Crown at all risks and perils, renouncing his rights and prerogatives as the nearest collateral Prince to the throne of Austria. The Times assumes that Great Britain will acknowledge and favor the new régime in Mexico. The reply of Prince GORTSCHAKOFF to the French and Austrian notes on the Polish question has been published, together with accompanying memoranda. These replies manifest the same firm tone as that addressed to England. Relative to the allusion made M. DROUYN DE LHUYS to the Western Provinces of Russia, as participating in the international stipulations which settled in 1815 the destiny of Warsaw. Prince GORTSCHAKOFF maintains that the Imperial Cabinet cannot admit that point of view, even in the most restricted manner. Russia will not admit the right of Europe to interfere in her internal affairs. It is said that Count RECHBERG, the Austrian minister, has advised that no response be made to Prince GORTSCHAKOFF'S dispatch, but that the three great Powers now await further action on the part of the Russian Government toward the Poles. The Paris Moniteur has reproduced the letter from Warsaw of Aug. 15, addressed by the Polish National Government to Prince CZARTORISKY, claiming belligerent rights, and its publication in the French official organ is considered by English and continental journals as equivalent to an unofficial recognition by NAPOLEON of the Polish National Government. Russia was actively engaged in warlike preparations. American topics were still greatly discussed in England, but there was a general admission, even by those journals which have been most strongly pro-Southern, that the rebel cause showed signs of utter ruin. The Confederate loan had again declined to 30@28 per cent. discount. The pirate Alabama, according to St. Helena advices of Aug. 6, had boarded the ship Havelock, off the Cape of Good Hope, and reported that she had captured a bark to the eastward of the Cape and fitted her out as a privateer, also that the Georgia was with her. The steamer Great Eastern had been withdrawn from the American trade for the present. The Liverpool Cotton market closed easier and at weak prices. The Breadstuffs and Provision markets were steady and few transactions taking place. Consols closed at 93¼@93¾ for money.

GENERAL NEWS.

In the Board of Aldermen yesterday, the resolution vetoed by the Mayor, directing the Comptroller to sell at public auction for a period of five years, the slips at Piers Nos. 32 and 33, E. R., for ferry purposes, was called up and read The resolution was adopted notwithstanding the Mayor's objections. A resolution was adopted, giving permission to the Hudson River Railroad Company to use a dummy on their road from the Chambers-street depot to Thirty-second-street, the Company to pay the sum of $50 as license on each engine or dummy so used. The Corporation Counsel sent in a communication in response to a resolution of inquiry adopted by this Board, asking if he had taken any steps to have the injunction dissolved, served upon this Board, prohibiting them from taking action upon the $3,000,000 ordinance Relief fund. He states that he has received no papers upon which he could take any action. The Committee on Finances reported in favor of donating $1,000 to the widow of the late GEO. W. BADGER, Ex-Foreman of Engine Company No. 19, who was killed at the fire in Cherry-street, which was adopted.

The Board of Councilmen laid over a resolution by Mr. O'BRIEN, requesting the Mayor to offer a reward of $500 for the apprehension of the murderer or murderers of JOHN FITZGERALD, who was killed in August last, in Avenue A. A petition from some professed "Rev." individual, who is monamanical upon the subject of the immoralities of the City, and proposing hydropathic treatment to do away with them, by employing the firemen to wash away all persons occupying buildings of known moral impurity, was read, and created considerable amusement. It was rejected on account of informality, no member choosing to make it regular by indorsing it. A resolution by the President, MORGAN JONES, Esq., to grant the use of the chamber of the Board to the County Substitute and Relief Committee, except during the sessions of the Board, was tabled, on motion of Mr. HAYES, and without debate. Some general business was transacted, and the Board adjourned to Thursday.

The October term of the Court of Oyer and Terminer commenced yesterday before Judge BARNARD, and the Court of General Sessions before Recorder HOFFMAN. In the former Court the roll of Grand Jurors was called, and no quorum appearing, those who answered to their names were discharged till 10 o'clock Wednesday morning. No cases being ready for trial, the Court adjourned for the day. In the Court of Sessions, the case of Dr. E. M. BROWN, charged with murder in connection with the "Eighth-avenue Abortion case," was called on and eight jurors were sworn, when the panel was found to be exhausted, and the Court, after ordering a new panel to be summoned, adjourned to 10½ o'clock this morning.

The speculative excitement which prevailed in August, and abated in September, seems to have returned to the Stock market since the first of the present month. The business yesterday was large on the Share list, and at buoyant prices. Gold also advanced to 144⅞, and Exchange on London to 158½@159½ ℔ cent. The Money market is steady at 6 ℔ cent.

Flour and Wheat declined slightly yesterday and were only moderately inquired for. Corn was brisker and dearer. Provisions were more freely purchased; Pork and Lard closed higher. A fair demand prevailed for Hay, Hops, Leather and the principal kinds of Groceries. Cotton, Tallow and Whiskey were in good request and advancing. Naval Stores were improving. Freights were rather quiet.

The cattle markets are crowded with animals, a large portion of them poor little steers, totally unfit for beef, and the low prices obtained ought to convince owners that it is unprofitable to send such cattle to market. There were over 4,900 beeves at Forty-fourth-street alone, and although trade was brisk Monday morning and a great many were worked off, still an unusually large number were left over for the second day's sales. A very small number of choice fat steers brought 11c. ℔ lb. net weight, the decline on this class, owing to few on sale, being scarcely 1c., while on the fair beeves, which brought 9c.@10c. the decline was 1c. ℔ lb., taking price and weights into account. The poorer grades were in little request and some of the "scallawags" were sold as low as 5c. ℔ lb. Government agents and country buyers were assisting to reduce the numbers, and between them and butchers, the yards may possibly be cleared to-day, but only at very low rates.

Mason and the Rams—The Action of the British Government.

We have long blamed England, because compelled. The unfairness of her Government and of her ruling classes, toward our country in its day of adversity, has made it impossible for any true American to speak well of her. The injury was too flagrant, the motive too palpable. Yet our indignation has always been mingled with sorrow. There has been no getting rid of the feeling that England ought to have stood by our people closer than ever in their resistance of this monstrous attempt of Slavery against their national life. England was bound to this by every moral obligation, every sentiment of honor, every line of her Anti-Slavery record. Had she thus kept true, it would have cemented a moral alliance between the two nations, such as the world has never yet seen. Their affinity in blood, in language, in religion, would have been deepened into an infinitely warmer and worthier brotherhood. They would thenceforth have stood forth as the paired pioneers of the world's march, twin champions of all that is free and grand, the very Castor and Pollux of the nations. It is a calamity to the race that England has so greatly failed in the part so plainly imposed upon her by Providence. The material embarrassments and mischiefs occasioned by her neutral policy, falsely so called, are of small consequence compared with the moral rupture that has resulted. The material harm is but limited. It has hindered us, but it has not thwarted us. In spite of it, we are now close upon final and glorious success. But though the physical effects of what England has done, and has failed to do, are passing away, the moral effects remain. The waters of the Atlantic have closed over the Harvey Birch and the Jacob Bell; and so might we wish that the waters of oblivion could close over the British faithlessness that caused it. But it is vain to wish. It is not in human nature that this thing should be.

Yet misfortune has its grades. At one time it seemed that the conduct of England would make war between her and us inevitable. Her Government was possessed apparently with an infatuation, or a malignity, or a combination of both, that left us no alternative but to proceed in open arms against her just so soon as we should dispose of the assassin within our doors. We hail every sign that there will be no such necessity. Though it may be ever so true that the bosom relations which might have been produced between England and the United States by this Slaveholder's rebellion are now forever impossible, and that long years must pass before even the old accord can be restored, yet if actual war can be averted it will be a great thing gained. Lasting alienation between two such nations is unfortunate, but it is not nearly so bad as open war.

It is with sincere satisfaction, then, that we recognize two recent events in England that betoken fairer dealing toward this Republic. We mean the detention in the Mersey of the rams built there for the express purpose of breaking up our blockade; and the assumption of such an attitude toward Mr. MASON that he is obliged to give up all further effort to obtain the official notice of the Government, and to leave the country. We have no disposition to scrutinize the motives that now prompt these acts of justice. We care not at all to dwell upon the fact that there are no good reasons for exhibiting such conduct now that did not just as clearly exist months ago. We will keep down the words that rush to our lips, that it is because the rebellion is sinking that the British Government changes its posture. Let all that pass. It is enough that England at last begins to treat us as a nation that has its dignity and its rights. Let her stick to this, and, whatever we may think of the spirit, we will yet prize the action.

Had these engines of destruction been suffered to leave the British shores, they probably would have inflicted vastly greater damage upon our war plans than anything we have yet had to meet of foreign origin. It is doubtful whether we have anything in our navy that could have successfully coped with them; certainly not in such localities as would have been selected for their scenes of operation. Of course it cannot be admitted that anything they could have done would have retrieved the rebel fortunes. Were our blockade, at this stage of the war, completely broken up, and every Northern ship and Northern harbor threatened by resistless corsairs, the fact would still stand that the rebel territory on shore is fast shriveling, and that soon there will not be a single foothold left. It is our armies that will bring this rebellion to the dust; and nothing that floats can prevent it. Still immense injury might have been done by these rams. Though they could not have begun to save "the Confederacy," they could have given us fearful wounds. And what is still more, they could, and, in all likelihood, would have maddened us into a war with the nation that hurled them upon us, just so soon as our hands were again free. These rams, there can be little doubt, would have opened a floodgate of sorrows. We have no hesitation in telling England that she has done a very wise, as well as a very just thing, in stopping them.

The sending Mr. MASON into Coventry is also excellent. It virtually severs all connection with "the Confederacy," and sets at rest the last possible chance for a recognition. The rebel organs so construe it, and we dare say it is perfectly true. It is all the more acceptable, because in marked contrast with the treatment extended to Mr. SLIDELL by the French Emperor. It is pleasant to feel that it is yet possible for England to pursue an independent policy. We repel any idea that the Allies are each acting a concerted part—that the one plays fast, while the other plays loose—that the one runs with the hare, while the other holds with the hounds. We take the act of England as it stands, and give her a good round credit not only for keeping the rams close, but for letting MASON go.

Let the British Government persevere in its new efforts. It may do a good deal yet to reduce liabilities, though probably a full squaring of accounts is, at this late day, quite out of the question. The less the balance, the less the chance for trouble hereafter.

Strategic Points and Political Capitals—Their Relation to the War.

The result of the military operations during the last three months proves in a very pointed way the theory which we have long maintained, that the main, though not the sole obstacle, we admit to the suppression of the rebellion, lies in the existence of rebel armies in the field, rather than in their possession of certain strategical points. We were, we believe, the first, a year ago, to call attention to this fact, at a time when the public mind was so intent upon the capture of Richmond that there was a very general impression afloat that the fall of that place would terminate the war. The exaggerated importance which was ascribed, at the beginning of the struggle, to the possession of certain places, was due to a very natural tendency to apply to our operations rules deduced from European military history, in which the capture of a city or fall of a fortress very frequently has determined the fate of a whole province or kingdom. To occupy Paris, or Vienna and Berlin, is, in European warfare, to obtain complete mastery of France, or Austria and Prussia, and we hence not unreasonably concluded that in this, as in other things, "haute strategie" in America resembled "haute strategie" in the Old World.

It is now generally recognized that this was a mistake, and that there are very few analogies to be discovered in European warfare that can render us much service in ours. The error was due, in the main, to our leaving out of sight the immense distances which in our field of operations separate one important point from another. A strategic point might very well, under certain conditions, decide the fate of a kingdom, but it is for a continent we are contending, and it is a physical impossibility for the possession or loss of any one town or fortress to seriously influence any such struggle as this. This will be apparent even by the rules of European experience, if we suppose the contest transferred to Europe. The territory which we are bent on wresting from the rebels is as large as the whole European continent, excluding Russia, and we can see at a glance, that if it were the latter we were trying to drive them out of, the fall of Paris or Madrid would not damage them fatally, if at all, as long as their armies could retreat into Germany, Italy and Turkey. These are all separate States, it is true, but if they were fighting in coalition, as in 1814, they would not be more distinct, and therefore better able to shift their headquarters, without serious strategic detriment, than the Southern States, under their present organization. The relation between Georgia and Virginia, for instance, though in the field it looks like a despotism, is in reality only a military alliance.

On an area so immense as the field of our operations is, and in which distance is, if we may use the expression, aggravated by the sparseness of the population and badness of the roads, we now see, by actual demonstration, what a year ago we only imagined, that no one point possesses any decisive importance as long as the rebel armies exist and have territory enough left to manœuvre, recruit and subsist in. We have in our possession at this moment every town and stronghold along the whole line of the Mississippi. We have the river itself. We have the great seaport at its mouth. We have East Tennessee, the key of Georgia, and North and South Carolina. We have, in short, everything which were the South a kingdom like France, or Italy, or Spain, ought to lay it helpless at our feet. And yet the struggle is not over. We have just fought a battle of the first order, suffered a severe repulse, and have still a force of the enemy in our front in the West, sufficiently strong to inspire apprehensions as to the issue. In Virginia it is by no means certain that we could reach Richmond to-day, without winning in an action that would rival Waterloo in bloodshed and surpass it in fierceness.

All this proves, that while the possession of strategic points is not only important but necessary to the complete and permanent overthrow of the rebellion, the great difficulty of all is the existence of brave and well led rebel armies. Their presence in any position makes that a stronghold, whether it be in the mountains or on a plain, and until they are destroyed there can be no peace. President LINCOLN has said many sagacious things, but he has never uttered anything more sagacious than when, in his recent letter, he spoke of the folly of offering amnesties or terms of peace to the Southern population while the Southern armies are still in the field. It is these that are the real sources of trouble and rule the people, and no peace made with the people can be binding or worth the paper on which it would be written, while LEE and BRAGG and BEAUREGARD have twice three hundred thousand men under their orders, who are able to recruit their ranks and obtain their subsistence,—if need be, by force,—no matter what the rest of the community may say or think.

Lee's Report.

The specific object of LEE'S Summer invasion of Pennsylvania was a matter of profound mystery and endless speculation at the time; and the mystery is not perfectly cleared up by his official report of that campaign, which has just seen the light at Richmond, and which we give in full this morning. It was thought by some that the gigantic army of the rebels, whose numbers were accurately stated by a reliable City cotemporary at 190,375, meant nothing less than the capture of Washington and Baltimore, the capture of Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, the capture of New-York and Boston, and, for that matter, the capture of Cincinnati and Rouse's Point. With Panic preceding them, Death accompanying them, and Desolation following in their wake, there seemed no reason why they should not work their will and wreak their vengeance upon the North; and those who remember the history of that time will recall how the Tribune proposed to placate them in advance, and to "bow to destiny," as impersonated in JEFF. DAVIS, in event of their "watering their horses in the Delaware."

Gen. LEE, in the course of his report, sets forth several insufficient and incoherent reasons for his undertaking the offensive campaign of June and July. He judiciously says not a word about Washington, Philadelphia, or Baltimore; he indicates no intelligible or comprehensive scheme of operations—no object likely to be successful or decisive, or to compensate for the labors and risks he was about to assume. But he apprises us that as HOOKER'S position opposite Fredericksburgh was unassailable, it was determined to draw him from it—the execution of which purpose embraced the relief of the Shenandoah Valley, and, if practicable, the transfer of hostilities north of the Potomac; and he further thought that he might obtain an opportunity to strike a blow at HOOKER'S army, or at least compel it to leave Virginia, and so break up our plan of campaign for the Summer. In addition to this, it was hoped that "other valuable results" might be obtained. What the other hoped-for results may have been, is left to be surmised; but so far as LEE'S purpose is propounded in the ends given above, we do not think that military men who are now acquainted with the situation as it existed on both sides, will have much occasion to admire the wisdom displayed in his plan or rather his mode of operations. After these preliminary statements, Gen. LEE proceeds to give a view of the movements of each of the three corps of his army, from the line of the Rappahannock and the Rapidan across the Blue Ridge, up the Shenandoah Valley and over the Potomac; but the only thing we find indicating in any way an object or purpose beyond those mentioned, is the statement that after the whole of his army had crossed the Potomac, "preparations were made to advance upon Harrisburgh." This purpose, however, was frustrated by the northward advance of our army as far as South Mountain, which menaced LEE'S communications with the Potomac, prevented the progress of his march, compelled the concentration of his army on the east side of the mountains, and brought about, at Gettysburgh, that "fair opportunity to strike a blow" at our army which he claims to have sought, but whose result was so different from his anticipations that it compelled him to abandon all his projects, whatever they may have been, retrace his steps to the Potomac, down the Shenandoah Valley, over the Blue Ridge Mountains, and back to the Rappahannock, from which he had set out with such high hopes fifty days before.

This report of LEE confirms the opinion universally entertained, that a grand opportunity was missed to strike a blow at his army while it was at Williamsport, making preparations to retreat across the Potomac. He confesses to his embarrassments in that position, and brings to our knowledge some whose existence we had surmised, but of which we previously had no proof. At the same time, his campaign is throughout tacitly confessed to have been a total and stupendous failure—even accepting his own confession of its objects; but we are persuaded now, as during the pendency of the campaign, that its real and final object was the capture of Washington.

CONSISTENCY.—The London Times is greatly shocked at sundry inconsistencies which it professes to have discovered in President LINCOLN'S declarations of opinion and of policy during the past two years. The Times was always very sensitive on the subject of consistency. As it never changes its own opinions, never in the slightest degree adapts its policy to the emergencies or interests of the moment, and always clings tenaciously to whatever opinion it once utters, it is quite natural that any one who pursues a different course should incur its distrust and censure. Upon one point, however, Mr. LINCOLN has certainly been consistent; he has never earned the praise or escaped the denunciation of the Times. He may have wavered and possibly changed in other matters—but in this he has been firm. And it is only fair to add that in this, and in nothing else, the Times has been consistent also.

JOURNALISM AT THE SOUTH.—The New-Orleans Times is the name of a new Union journal just started in the Crescent City. It comes to us elegantly printed, on fine paper, with full and clear reports of local matters, and sharp, sensible editorials on all the topics of the day. It is thoroughly and heartily loyal, is written in good English, and does not mistake coarse vulgarity and rhetorical clap-trap for strength of argument or earnestness of purpose. It understands apparently how to discuss questions of grave public concern with dignity and candor, and can also differ from an opponent without branding him as a felon, or denouncing him as an idiot. So far as we can judge from the few numbers thus far issued, its editor seems capable of being firm in principle without being violent in temper, and he does not deem it necessary to go into paroxysms of wrath in order to convince the public of his own sincerity, or of his opponent's errors. Perhaps, if we had thought of it in season, we might have saved ourselves the trouble of this analysis by copying the statement of the New-Orleans correspondent of the Tribune, that in style and tone, as well as in its typographical appearance, the New-Orleans Times is a very accurate reproduction of its New-York namesake. That, we presume, tells the whole story: but it may not be amiss to add that it is edited by J. R. HAMILTON, Esq., a gentleman of ability, an accomplished scholar, a man of conscience and character, and, to crown this catalogue of his virtues, the special correspondent of the NEW-YORK TIMES.

The State Senate.

The Union men throughout the State are selecting very excellent candidates for members of the Legislature. In the Clinton and Essex District (Fourteenth) they have nominated P. E. HAVENS, Esq., a young lawyer of marked ability, unspotted character and considerable legislative experience. He has served two terms in the Assembly with great credit to himself and his constituents. He has a clear logical mind, speaks with force, fluency and effect, and is never diverted from substantial and practical good sense in his treatment of public questions, by vague speculation or a desire for temporary applause. We trust there is not the slightest doubt of his election by a large majority.

In the Twenty-third, (Tioga, Broome and Tompkins,) the Union candidate is Hon. EZRA CORNELL, well known as President of the State Agricultural Society, and an enthusiast in everything relating to the development of the wealth and resources of the State. He is a man of sound judgment, large experience, great liberality and the most unbending integrity. He has also served two terms in the Assembly, where he exerted very great influence by his practical sagacity and knowledge of public affairs. He has recently built a fine building for a free library in the town of Ithaca, and in this and other ways makes most liberal use of his abundant means. His tastes and abilities are admirably calculated to make him a useful and influential Senator.

Academy of Music.

Mr. MARETZEK'S opening night was as brilliant as the most sanguine of managers could have expected or desired. The house was completely crowded, and the opera of "Roberto Devereux" passed off with éclat. The manager is to be congratulated on these results. He has endeavored—and we hope with permanent success—to reform the old method of conducting matters. Instead of deluging the City with puffs of indifferent singers, he has engaged a first-class company, and left to the public the task of deciding upon their respective merits. The experiment, so far, has been singularly successful. All Mr. MARETZEK'S artists have been received with tumultuous favor, and although there was no preliminary flourish of trumpets anent the opening night, and not even a ghost to arrest the public attention, the house was, as we have previously stated, completely filled.

"Roberto Devereux," the opera played last night, although new to the present generation of operagoers, will be remembered by the habitués of the old Astor-place Opera-house, where it was produced, and by the loungers in that most delightful, provoking and inconvenient of lyric establishments, Castle Garden—where it was subsequently revived. Like almost all the operas of the true Italian repertoire, it was brought out originally by M. MARETZEK, and it comes back to us naturally under his bâton. We have already published the plot, and it is only necessary to add that the story is singularly dramatic, and leads to a series of situations that could hardly be improved. Compared with the libretti of VERDI'S operas, "Roberto" is a masterpiece of style. DONIZETTI seems to have been fully conscious of his opportunity, and has set the words to music that will rank favorably with the best that his muse has given to the world. Those happy and dramatic combinations of voice for which, more than for orchestral treatment, this composer is famous are found here in great profusion. The concerted pieces are singularly meritorious, and whilst delighting the popular ear by a fluent vein of melody, are constructed with such ingenuity that they satisfy the more exacting taste of the musician. So much of the music has retained its popularity that the least punctual of operagoers will be astonished to find that he is already familiar with some of the leading morceaux. But if there is not freshness, there is assuredly much graceful ease and melodic fluency in the score. Although many of the scenes display unusual powers of concentration, there is never any visible effort in obtaining the sought-for result. The right mood is struck at once, and expends itself naturally in the situation that has evoked it. DONIZETTI in all his works displays this commanding characteristic of true genius. The material which he supplies to the artist is so simple, touching and to the point, that the artist, if he have dramatic talent, can always mold it to the fashion of his own fancy, and so present it in a new dress. How many versions have we seen of Lucia, Lucrezia, Leonore, Maria, and how seldom do we hear of a great artist making a great success in any save these works. The rôles in "Roberto Devereux" are capable of any amount of dramatic expansion; they are all first-class acting parts, and are thus happily adapted to Mr. MARETZEK'S company. Mme. MEDORI, who made her rentrée in the rôle of Elizabeth, has seized two emotional salliencies of the character with great strength—love and revenge. The first is of a petulent and distrustful kind, stormy as an April day, yet sometimes as bright; the other is a transient feeling, very fierce whilst it lasts, but soon over; it gives way after the death of Roberto to a rage which is truly grand, and which culminates in the fierce rondo with which the opera concludes. In all the scenes with the hero, Mme. MEDORI'S acting was marked by a dignified elaboration of these phases, but in the rondo she was completely overwhelming. Vocally, too, we have no recollection of ever having heard the lady to greater advantage. Her voice has gained in freshness, whilst its power and volume are as tremendous as heretofore. We need scarcely add that her reception was in the highest degree enthusiastic.

Signor MAZZOLENI is so thorough an artist that it is difficult to decide which most to praise, his singing or his acting. The true art-feeling and intelligence that pervade his impersonation of Roberto leave little to be desired. It seemed to us that the gentleman was in rare voice last evening, and that nothing interfered with the easy use which he made of his remarkable organ. He toyed, in fact, with vocal difficulties, and in one particular feat, the use of the crescendo, literally electrified the audience, pouring out an ever increasing flood of sound as though it came from an inexhaustible source. There are few tenors in the world who possess so much fulness in the lower and middle part of their voices. It is this, combined with executive skill of the first class, that enables Signor MAZZOLENI to produce some of his best effects—the crescendo amongst others. The dramatic features of the rôle, we need scarcely say, were seized with the most complete success.

It will be seen from what we have said, that the opera depends almost entirely on the concerted music. The balance was not quite just last evening, in consequence of the very severe and palpable indisposition of the baritone, Signor BELLINI. The drawback was irreparable, and the effect was to cast over the performance a degree of tameness which does not belong to the music, and which we are sure will disappear on the next representation. Mlle. SULZER, as the Duchess, sang with much fervor, but the rôle is a little too much for her powers.

The opera has been placed on the stage in a satisfactory manner; the dresses, in particular, were excellent. Mr. MARETZEK, on his entrance, was received with a hearty round of applause, and the orchestra and chorus (they have not much to do in this opera) were very good.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

THE COMMAND OF THE WASHINGTON DEFENCES.

It is now reduced to a certainty that Gen. HEINTZELMAN will be relieved of his command of the defences of Washington. The succession to his place is understood by many to have been tendered to Gen. BARNARD, the builder of all the Washington defences, and by others to have been offered to Gen. MARTINDALE.

THE "DIPLOMATIC CLUB."

This organization, which was started three or four months ago by the members of the foreign diplomatic corps, has been dissolved. THE REBEL ARMY SHOELESS.

Deserters from LEE'S army say that the rebel soldiers are becoming barefoot, and that apprehensions are felt by their officers that great suffering will ensue this Winter among the troops unless the blockade of Charleston, through which port most of the foreign goods have reached the Confederacy, is raised speedily.

SURGEONS FOR THE U. S. ARMY.

A Board of medical officers, to consist of Surgeons J. J. B. WRIGHT, E. H. ABADIE and Assistant-Surgeon J. H. HILL, U. S. A., has been ordered to convene at New-York City on the 15th inst., or as soon thereafter as practicable, for the examination of candidates for appointment as Assistant-Surgeons in the regular army, and such Assistant-Surgeons as may be brought before it for promotion as Surgeons.

REBEL REPORTS FROM CHARLESTON.

Gen. Gillmore Again Briskly at Work.

FORTRESS MONROE, Sunday, Oct. 4.

The flag-of-truce boat New-York, in charge of Maj. MULFORD, arrived last night from City Point. Richmond papers to the 3d inst. are received. They contain the following, in addition to what has already been telegraphed:

CHARLESTON, Thursday, Oct. 1.

On the 30th ult. the enemy fired 200-pounder Parrotts all day, at intervals of fifteen minutes, alternately at Sumter and Johnson, and Battery Simpkins. Fort Moultrie and Battery Simpkins replied vigorously. No casualties or damage of importance on our side. Very heavy firing is going on between the hostile batteries this morning.

CHARLESTON, Thursday, Oct. 1.

The firing during to-day has been heavier than for several weeks past. The enemy has been steadily pounding at the ruins of Sumter from his old batteries on Morris Island, beyond Wagner. His fire was chiefly at Sumter, but he also shelled Fort Johnson. Our batteries and Fort Moultrie replied with a brisk and steady fire. All quiet to-night.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The Legislature adjourned to-day, having passed the following bills: An act to prevent desertion from the service; an act for the raising and granting privileges to volunteer companies of mounted infantry; an act to provide for the election of members of Congress; an act to amend an act to supply negro labor for defence.

FROM THE MISSOURI-KANSAS BORDER.

Movements of Gen. Blunt's Trains Cut Off by Guerrillas—Troubles of Unionists in Platte County—Editorial Convention.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, Oct. 5.

The Democrat's Leavenworth special says: 'Gen. BLUNT has left Fort Scott for Fort Smith. The guerrillas are cutting off trains, and the enemy around Fort Smith are in a menacing attitude.

The Mayor of Parkville and 100 other citizens of Platte County, Mo., have made a statement to the effect that there are now in Leavenworth over 100 Union men and families who have fled from Platte County for fear of violence from the militia, and if a change in the condition of affairs is not soon made, the lives and property of the Union men of Platte county will be at the mercy of men whose loyalty has always been at the best doubtful. So many desperate refugees have arrived at Leavenworth from Missouri, that the Mayor has been compelled to issue a proclamation providing means to relieve their necessities.

A convention of all the editors of Kansas is to be held at Leavenworth, on Wednesday, to arrange for concert of action on the military miasule in the Department of Missouri.

THE BLOCKADE.

HAVANA, Wednesday, Sept. 30.

The steamer Kearney came in yesterday. She brings from Key West several officers, who go home on the Roanoke.

On the 28th the Tioga brought into Key West the rebel steamer Herald, with 252 bales of cotton on board, and the agents of a company formed in the rebel States with a capital of two millions, to pursue the business of running the blockade. This was their first attempt.

LOSS OF MONEY.—A pocketbook was lost from an omnibus last evening, near Barnum's Museum, containing a $50 and $5 greenback, two $1 bills and a long gold chain. The pocketbook was picked up by a gentleman, who will perform a good act by leaving it at the World Office for Mrs. B. H. MAYNAS. It belongs to one to whom the loss would cause great distress.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Recorder Hoffman.

The October term of this Court opened yesterday morning with the trial of Dr. EDWARD M. BROWN, indicted for murder in the second degree, in causing the death of CLEMENTINA ANDERSON, on the 19th of November last by means of an abortion. The circumstances of this case were very fully developed on the Coroner's inquest, and are doubtless still familiar to most readers of the newspapers. The case was brought on for trial in April last before Judge BARNARD, when, after half the jury were sworn, they were discharged, and the case postponed by order of the Court. A point of law was thereupon raised by defendant's counsel, H. L. CLINTON, Esq., that Dr. BROWN had been once placed in jeopardy, and could not be tried again. This point was decided against the prisoner after a very full argument before Recorder HOFFMAN. The Doctor has been confined in the Tombs since his first arrest, all applications for bail having been refused. Considerable difficulty was found yesterday in obtaining an unbiased jury, and the Court was obliged to adjourn without obtaining the full number. The Court ordered a new panel to be summoned for 10½ o'clock this morning, when the trial will doubtless proceed, as only four more jurors are required. Dr. BROWN is defended by H. L. CLINTON, Esq., and Ex-Judge STUART, and District-Attorney HALL conducts the case for the people.

Court of Oyer and Terminer.

The October Term of this Court opened at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, before Judge BARNARD. The roll of Grand Jurors was called, but not enough answering the summons to form a quorum, those present were discharged until Wednesday morning.

The list of Petit Jurors was called through and a large number were sworn. At the suggestion of District-Attorney HALL, the Court ordered an additional pannel of 75 Petit Jurors to be summoned, in contemplation of the right of challenge being fully exercised, as there was a large number of capital cases on the calendar. None of the cases on the day calendar being ready for trial, the Court adjourned to 10 o'clock this morning. Many of the riot cases that were transferred to this Court from the Court of Sessions will doubtless be sent back to the latter Court for trial during the Term.

Messrs. B. G. Wilder & Co., No. 100 Maiden-lane:

GENTLEMEN: On the 13th of July last my headquarters on the corner of 46th-st. and 3d-av. were attacked and destroyed by a mob. Previous to firing the building an attempt was made to break open the Safe purchased of you, but without success. It fell into the cellar and there remained exposed most of the time to an intense fire for seven days. When it was taken out most of the papers were found in good, legible condition. My consolidated enrollment lists, which were of especial value and which many hoped had been destroyed, were in a perfect state of preservation, and are now in my possession.

I want another Safe as good as the former sent to my headquarters.

HARLEM, July 30, 1863.

I have been deaf for over TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, and Dr. VON EISENBERG operated on both of my ears without the slightest pain—a thing that I could not believe could be done. I now hear well, and feel as I never felt for the last twenty years. The dexterity and skill with which the operation was performed evince the highest practical ability. I hear perfectly. It is now over a month since the operation, and I continue to feel as well as ever.

CATARRH CURED.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 23, 1863.

I have been suffering for the last three years from a severe Catarrh, with a continual dullness in my head, a tightness across my chest, a weight over my eyes, which were weak, watery and very painful. My nostrils were continually obstructed with a pouring of fluid. I have had frequent sneezing, hoarseness of my voice, generally attended with spitting, often with a fullness of my throat, together with a soreness and a dropping. Dr. VON EISENBERG has cured me of all these disagreeable sufferings. I now feel a new life. The treatment of Dr. VON EISENBERG is as skillful as it is successful; it is impossible to overrate the benefit I have received at his hands. I heartily recommend any one suffering like myself to place themselves under Dr. VON EISENBERG'S care, with a certainty of being speedily cured. I give this with gratitude and pleasure. I cannot forbear again saying that my voice, which was hoarse and thick when I applied to Dr. VON EISENBERG, is now clear and good; indeed, I feel abundantly satisfied.

JAMES LITTLE,
No. 245 7th-st., New-York.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 8.

I have been suffering for years past from a severe Catarrh, with a great heaviness over my eyes, with a severe depression, great uneasiness, and pain in my head, great difficulty in breathing, and a continual accumulation in my nostrils, which gave me restless nights for several years. I have consulted several physicians, who pronounced me to be consumptive. What I suffered for so long a time is indescribable. My system was entirely disarranged and greatly debilitated. I not only felt weak, but I had a cloud continually before my eyes, and my ears were so affected that I was threatened with a total loss of hearing. I must say, I think, I was guided by Providence to come to Dr. Von Eisenberg, who not only cured me of my Catarrh by removing an astonishing quantity of disagreeable matter from my head, but he restored me to perfect health, a blessing I have not enjoyed for many years. Now I enjoy a good night's rest, and pursue my business with comfort. I must acknowledge that Dr. Von Eisenberg's mild and scientific treatment for Catarrh deserves the highest commendation, as the principle which directs his system of curing Catarrh is such as to render success certain.

JAMES FURLONG, No. 856 2d-av.

No. 194 ALLEN-ST., NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rambling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain.

JOHN TAYLOR.

NEW-YORK, July 19, 1863.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CARROLL J. POST, No. 28 South-st.

SIGHT RESTORED.

JUNE 25, 1863.

My daughter brought me to Dr. VON EISENBERG almost completely blind in both eyes. I could not bear the pain nor the light. I am completely cured by Dr. VON EISENBERG, and called now to express my gratitude to the Doctor for his skill and unremitting attention, by which I recovered one of the most precious senses to me after being deprived of it for four years. It is only due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to state that I have tried several physicians in vain. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony to Dr. VON EISENBERG'S unrivaled success to any lady or gentleman who will call on me.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.
READ.

NEW-YORK, March 20, 1863.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg, with a certainty of being cured."

PROPOSALS.

ORDNANCE OFFICE,

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, Oct. 2, 1863.

SEALED PROPOSALS will be received at this office until the 30th day of October next, for BANDING and BUSHING the 42-pounder guns, at the forts and arsenals of the United States in the Atlantic States, amounting in number to 200 more or less.

The guns will be delivered at and removed from the establishment where the work is to be done at the cost of the United States.

Proposals for those on the Pacific coast—about 50 in number—will be received until the 10th of December next; and in the case of these, the guns will be delivered at San Francisco or its vicinity.

The guns are to be turned down to a true cylinder for the length of twenty-seven inches from the rear of the base ring, prepared to take a band of the best wrought-iron, the interior diameter of which will be twenty inches, and its thickness three inches.

The vent is to be bushed with a new bush of pure ingot copper, one inch in diameter and about nine and a half inches long, and bored with a vent of two-tenths of an inch.

Drawings of the gun in its original form, and with the band put on, can be seen at this office, at the Watertown Arsenal, Mass., at the Watervliet Arsenal, and at the New-York Agency, No. 45 Worth-street, City of New-York; at the Arsenal at Pittsburgh, Penn., and at Allegheny Arsenal, Pittsburgh, Penn.; at the Fort Monroe Arsenal, Va.; St. Louis Arsenal, Mo., and Benicia Arsenal, Cal.

The work is to be done to the entire satisfaction of the officer who will be appointed to superintend it, and payment will be made in full for each gun upon his certificate of inspection and receipt.

Proposals will state the price per gun for the whole operation; describe in detail the manner in which it is proposed to put on the band; the number they will band per month, and the time which will be required to do the whole work. The method and the time required for doing the work, as well as the price, will be important elements in considering the bids and awarding the contract.

No bids will be considered from any parties but such as are actually engaged in the manufacture of iron and heavy machinery, and who are, in the opinion of this Department, fully prepared to execute the work. In the case of parties not known to this Department, evidence to the foregoing effect must accompany the proposal.

Bond, with satisfactory sureties, to the amount of fifty per cent. of the bid, will be required for the fulfillment of the contract; and the Government reserves the right to reject any or all bids, if deemed unsatisfactory.

Proposals will be indorsed, "Proposals for Banding 42-Pounders," and will be addressed to Brig.-Gen. George D. Ramsay, Chief of Ordnance, Washington City.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 50 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. ADVICE TO LADIES.—IN ALL CASES where infallible medicines are desired, or mode of treatment that never fails, call upon Dr. A. M. MAURICEAU, Professor of Diseases of Women, author of "The Married Woman's Private Medical Companion," who treats female complaints exclusively. Office 129 Liberty-st.

PRIVATE CONSULTATION.—DR. HUNTER has for thirty years confined his attention to diseases of a certain class, in which he has treated more than fifty thousand cases without an instance of failure. His great remedy, HUNTER'S RED DROP, cures certain diseases when regular treatment and all other remedies fail; cures without dieting or restriction in the habits of the patient; cures without the disgusting and sickening effects of all other remedies; cures in new cases in less than six hours; cures without the dreadful consequent effects of mercury, but counteracts the poisonous property or annihilating the rank and poisonous taint that the blood is sure to absorb unless his remedy is used. That is what he claims for it, and what no other will accomplish. Its value in this respect has become so well known, that scientific men in every department of medical knowledge begin to appreciate it, for hardly a week passes that he is not consulted by druggists, chemists and physicians in regard to some pitiful patient who has exhausted the whole field of the faculty, and still the disease will appear. Its popularity is so great that there is not a quack doctor in the City that has not attacked it, and when they find their lies are not so easily swallowed, they then pretend that they can make it. It is $1 a vial, and cannot be obtained genuine anywhere but at the old office, No. 3 Division-st. Book for 15 three-cent stamps, 300 pages, 100 colored illustrations. The best work out.

EUROPEAN NEWS.

may say that I am not in any sense a Federalist. (Hear, hear.) I am not blind to the faults of the North. (Hear, hear.) I am not blind to the inconsistency with which this war has been carried on; nor am I blind to the words which some of the statesmen, and many of the papers, have used toward this country. (Hear.) But I still remember this, that they are, many of them, it is true, quite unconsciously, yet that they are, fighting—and cannot help fighting the battle for Freedom—against the Southern Confederacy, who, avowedly and determinedly, and without any attempt at concealment, are fighting the battle of Slavery. They tell me I am fanatical upon this question. I do not feel that I owe an apology to an English audience for being fanatical on the question of Slavery. (Hear, hear.) As to where there shall be liberty in this world is a question upon which no man can be fanatical. The slaveholders, finding that they could no longer wield the American common wealth to support the system of Slavery, said, "We will break up and destroy the Union, and set up a Confederacy of our own." The men of the North, the patriots of the Union, said, "We will not submit to that;" and we, many of us in England, who were utterly reckless of money or life when we thought Russia merely threatened to stop the communication with our Eastern possessions—who were still more reckless of money and life to preserve our empire in India—when we know that there is scarcely one of us in this country, of any party, who would not, if it came to the dire alternative, use every power he possessed to keep Ireland as a sister country in union with England—yet we who know that we have this patriotic feeling and would undergo the greatest sacrifices before we would allow our country to be cut to pieces or diminished, or to become a weak Power rather than a strong Power—we complained of the North Americans, and said to them, "You have entered upon a wicked war," because they would not allow the slaveholders of the South, in order to perpetuate and extend Slavery, to break up their country, and make it a divided, a weak and almost powerless country instead of a great and powerful one. (Loud cheers.) I say this, that I will give many of those who argue thus the credit that if the same or anything like it was upon the issue in England, they would be as foremost in desiring to prevent their country from being destroyed as the most ardent and fierce Northerner at this moment. (Hear, hear.) That is the way in which this dreadful war has come to pass. I mourn over that war; I lament it. I also think it a wicked war, but I charge the wickedness upon those who began the war in the worst of all possible causes. (Cheers.) I am willing to allow that even with them—for a strange thing is human nature—some of them may have forced themselves into the belief that they are in a good cause. I don't pretend to deny the valor of the men of the South; I will not deny that they have shown many fine qualities in this war. I will go even further, and say that it is very difficult for men, even in a bad cause, to have submitted to the sacrifices and self-denial which many men in the South have undergone, without coming out of it purer and better than when they went in. But while that is the case, I cannot forget upon which side the right is. (Hear, hear.) Though I lament more than I can speak the suffering which is the result of this war, and the crimes which have been committed on both sides, from the presence of an influential American I cannot but say it would be well if the public opinion of America were raised more strongly against the atrocities committed in the Northern States as well as in the Southern. (Hear, hear.) I am well aware that in a tremendous crisis like this there are strong temptations, and that even Christian and patriotic people find it difficult to prevent war being carried on other than with that ferocity which more or less always accompanies war; still, great as are the temptations, Christians must not forget their duty. Nevertheless, I say, much as we lament this war, its sufferings and crimes, I do from the very bottom of my heart rejoice at what we may now hope will be the result of it. (Applause.) After many changes up and down,—after it had appeared as if this slave-power would be victorious and triumphant, and that we should, in this Nineteenth century, see successful the attempt to raise a great new fabric, whose corner stone was Slavery—(and such an attempt to retard the course of progress has not been attempted since JULIAN attempted to stop the progress of Christianity)—at last a change has come. Look for a moment at what would have been the case if the slave power had succeeded, and we had been left to MR. GLADSTONE'S hope, that in its success would be its failure. I believe there would eventually have been a failure if the South had been triumphant. They would have raised against them the public opinion of the world, and freedom would have been triumphant eventually, because there is a God that rules the world and not a devil. (Loud cheers.) But terrible as is now the contest, it would then have been even more terrible, for the slave power would have been stronger; and now that the contest has come, I rejoice that we can foresee this result, that, whatever else comes out of it—whether a restored Union, which does not now seem impossible, or a subordinate, hemmed up, weak, slaveholding Republic in the Cotton States, this, at least, is certain—the dream of the slaveholders of a slave empire has disappeared, and out of this war we shall get this compensation, that on the continent of America the power and principles of Freedom will rule, and not the power and principle of Slavery. (Renewed cheers.) I think it just arises from our losing sight of the question at issue that we have treated this American struggle in a manner that has not unnaturally excited ill feeling in that country, and I think the more we can hear from intelligent Americans, who understand our country as well as their own, and who can tell us facts upon this American struggle, the more we shall be able to get to a good understanding of it, and therefore to remove that ill feeling. (Hear.) I have now, what I scarcely ever had before, the opportunity of speaking to an American, and Mr. CHANNING must allow me to say a word or two to him, and, through him, to some of his countrymen. It may be that Englishmen do not quite understand the feeling of the Americans, and I think in America also there is some misconception and misunderstanding of the action of England. There is a feeling in America, if we may judge by the papers and the statements of the leading men, that England has done them a wrong, an actual and positive wrong, which it is their business, almost their duty, to revenge when they have the opportunity. I say that is not the case. I don't mean that there have not been men in England who have taken the side of the South. There have been many, especially in what are called the upper classes; but, after all, it is not for the speeches of men, even if they have "hon." or "noble" stuck before their names, that the country must be responsible, nor is it for writing in newspapers that we must be held responsible. Mr. CHANNING would not like me to make him or his country responsible for the writing of the New-York Herald. (Laughter.) I don't compare the New-York Herald to the Times or the Morning Herald; but I say the Americans should not make us responsible for anything written in the Times or Morning Herald. (Hear.) All we ought to be judged by is the action of the country, and as far as the action of the country is concerned—so far as we have acted in a national capacity, the Americans have little or no reason to find fault, and that is what they ought to bear in mind. (Hear.) They also ought to remember, when their hearts rankle at any expression made by many of the upper classes of the country, how their cause has been viewed by the great masses of the people. (Hear.) For every nobleman, for every man who has a title before his name who has taken the side of the South, there have been 10, 20 and even 100 hardworking men who have taken the side of the North and freedom. (Cheers.) And they have done so with every temptation and every inducement brought to bear upon them to take the other side. They have been told by ingenious men (I will not say sent for the purpose) that their sufferings—and many of them have been suffering deeply—have been caused by this war, and that the war has been caused by the action of the Federals; and yet such has been their instinctive feeling—they know what liberty is—and ill will it be for England when the working men forget what liberty is—such has been their instinctive feeling that they have refused to be misled; and I do say it will be ungenerous of America to remember anything against England when we can point to that large meeting of the half-starved workingmen of Manchester in the Free-trade Hall, (cheers,) when they took the lead in saying, "No matter what the sufferings we may endure, no matter what the sacrifices we may have to undergo, we will not allow our Government to depart from the strict principle of neutrality on behalf the slaveholding Confederacy." (Loud applause.) Mr. CHANNING and his friends must also recollect that although there may have been expressions—talk in favor of the South, there has been no action. There has been talk in the House of Commons in its favor I have felt, when in advocating a neutral policy I stated what I conceived to be the just claims of the North, I had not got the feeling of the House on my side; but, on the other hand, if any one tried to get the House of Commons to press upon the Government to depart from the principles of neutrality and adopt the side of the South, the common sense of the House was proved to be against him. (Hear, hear.) I say, therefore, to the Americans, as wise men, you must pay little attention to mere talk or mere writing, you must go by actions, and, judging them, we as a nation have done nothing against you. On the contrary, I say, to the credit of our Government—and not merely to the credit of the leaders of the Whig party, but also to the credit of the leaders of the Tory party, and to Lord DERBY especially, who in his speech against recognition at the beginning of the session laid down in language which it was impossible could fail to influence his party that any premature recognition would be a breach of international law—it is, thanks to the leaders of both parties, that our Government has resisted the notoriously strong pressure on the part of France to depart from strict neutrality and recognize the South: (cheers) and, therefore, instead of complaining of us, the Americans should remember that, as a nation, we have in that matter stood their friends. We have done no more than we ought to have done, but there is no doubt of it that we had our powerful and influential ally pressing us to recognize the South, and our Government refused to do it. (Hear, hear.) I am well aware there is one matter in which we may appear to have departed from this neutrality, and that is in the sailing of the Alabama. That again was not the act of the Government. I think Earl Russell was caught napping, (laughter,) but I know he did not wish her to go out, and has done his utmost to prevent any others following her. I want to say a word or two on this shipping question. Let us forget that we are at an Anti-Slavery meeting, and look at this purely as Englishmen taking a selfish view of it, and looking at it purely as affecting England's interests. I say that as a great maritime nation—the greatest commercial nation in the world—it is to our interest more than to those of any other nation that it should not be international law that ships may sail out of neutral ports to aid in belligerent operations such as the Alabama has engaged in, and which those two steam rams would do if they were not stopped. (Cheers.) I will just put a case in point. We had a war lately with Russia, and sent out the best fleet we could man under the best Admiral we could find to Cronstadt. Why did we do so? It was not that we supposed the fleet could batter down that fort. We also knew that in blockading Cronstadt we could not starve the trade of Russia, because it would only be a question of cost, and merchandise would be sent through Prussia by railway. But why we sent the fleet was that we wanted to make our own trade and commerce safe throughout the world, and we said: "We will seal up the port of Cronstadt to prevent the Russian privateers and ships-of-war going out and destroying our commerce." If we were to allow Alabamas to be the rule of international law for the future, such a course would have been a pure waste of money, because, instead of sending out privateers from Cronstadt, Russia could send them from New-York, Philadelphia, Hamburg, Havre, or any other port of the world. If we allow this to become international law the result will be that whenever we carry on war we shall be obliged to do one of two things—either to blockade every large port of every nation in the world, as well as the ports of the nation with which we are at war, or else to give up our commercial trade and sail our marine under the flags of other nations. There never was a case in which our interest was more clear than it is to have this stopped, and my great anxiety is lest this war should come to an end, (which I trust it will do soon,) before we have undone any harm which may have been done by our letting the Alabama go out; for, if we do not, depend upon it other countries will take advantage and use our own precedent against us. (Hear, hear.) I am glad that there is so large a meeting; and I hope you will do your best to strengthen the neutral policy of the Government on this question of ships. I do not deny that there are difficulties, which I wish MR. GLADSTONE to remember, and this is the great difficulty, that we have always felt it to be a point of honor not to alter our laws at the dictation of any foreign country, and although we see that we must make this matter plain for our own interests it is not an easy thing to do, but it is so evident that I feel persuaded the common sense of the country will insist upon it. (Hear.) Some people say, "What is the difference between sending out a ship-of-war and sending out cannon and muskets?" I don't mean to say that we should supply belligerents with muskets, but in this case both sides have got them. But cannon and muskets cannot be used for belligerent purposes until they get into the hands of the belligerents, and whatever quantity of cannon or muskets may be supplied, either to the Federals or the Confederates, they are useless until they get on to Federal or Confederate territory. Consequently the one belligerent Government has the chance of stopping, by blockading the ports of the other belligerent, and we may say if material of war enters it us their fault from want of power or activity to stop it. But they cannot guard thus against ships, because they never go into the ports, and if a neutral supplies such ships he is taking part in the war, and the only possible way in which a belligerent can stop this, is by going to war with the neutral. What we have to aim at, therefore, is to prevent our subjects sending out from our ports armaments which are to be used for belligerent purposes before they go into a belligerent port. That is the problem our lawmakers have to solve, and which the common sense and interest of the country will compel them to solve. (Hear.) I trust you will strengthen the hands of the Government in that matter. Efforts have been made to secure a premature recognition; they have been fruitless, and very much owing to the stand which Lord DERBY and others took in the early part of the session. But another effort is making, not so much in England as by our great ally the Emperor. We have hitherto avoided interference against all sorts of temptations; don't let us be dragged into it to serve the purposes of the French Emperor. (Cheers.) To use homely language, he has got into a mess with his expedition to Mexico. (Hear.) I am sorry we had anything to do with that Mexican business, but we had the sense to draw out of it very quickly. (Hear.) He went on with it, believing what was said in many quarters, that the Confederates were sure to succeed. It now appears by no means certain that the Confederates will succeed, and he finds himself with the new Mexican Empire on his back, does not know how to bear the load, and wants to shove the burden on the English people. (Laughter.) Don't let us take any part of that burden. (Cheers.) I am no advocate of the Monroe doctrine, and think they have uttered a great deal of nonsense in America respecting it, but it is no business of ours in any way to support the Emperor in his Mexican conquest, for it is nothing else. As to the declaration of the Mexican people that they desire a change of Government, it is only a declaration of a few of the people afraid of the French bayonets. (Hear.) I see it is stated, though I hope we shall have an explanation from Government, that we have something to do with pressing the Archduke MAXIMILIAN to put himself in the position of becoming a French pensioned Emperor in Mexico. If an Austrian Archduke has not got that sense of family pride which would prevent his accepting the rule of a people by the help of the great rival of his family, don't let him hereafter be able to say, "You induced me to put myself in this false position." The fact is, that the Emperor of the French knows that when this war is ended, he will find it difficult to keep up his power over Mexico, unless he has a Southern Confederacy between himself and the Union: so he starts a new idea for which he wants the French people to go to war. This idea, as it is expressed in a publication I purchased in Paris, and which is supposed to be written partly from his inspiration, is "to counterbalance the Anglo-Saxon race, and give the Latin race their chance upon the continent of America." (Laughter.) That may be a fantastic or a reasonable idea, but it is an idea for which we are not going to lose any money or blood to carry it out in Mexico. Therefore, I say, if there be, as I believe there are, attempts at this moment by the Emperor of the French to induce us now, even at the last hour, to recognize the South, there never was a clearer case than that our Government, which has preseved neutrality until this moment, should not be dragged into it by French intrigue to suit French purposes. [The honorable gentleman sat down amid loud cheers.]

Mr. T. B. BAINES moved, and the Rev. G. MATHER seconded, the first resolution, as follows:

"That in the measures of the Federal Government in relation to the negro race, and in the rapid spread and growth of Anti-slavery feeling in most parts of the Northern States, this meeting cannot but recognize the fact that the present calamitous war, began by the slaveholders to perpetuate and extend Slavery, is being overruled by Divine Providence for its destruction."

The Rev. W. H. CHANNING, on rising to support the motion, was received with cheers. At the conclusion of his address, the resolution was unanimously approved.

THE REBEL PRIVATEERS.

From the Shipping Gazette.

The following protest with reference to the seizure of the Anglo-Saxon by the Florida has just been published:

BRITISH CONSULATES, FINISTERE, COTES DU NORD, } MORBIHAN, BREST, Aug. 25, 1863.

By this public instrument of protest be it known and made manifest unto all whom it doth or may concern, that on this day, Tuesday, the 25th day of August, 1863, before me, Sir ANTHONY PERRIER, C. B., Her Britannic Majesty's Consul for the Department of Finistere, Morbihan, and Cotes du Nord, voluntarily came and personally appeared EVAN EVANS, Channel Pilot, (having master's certificate,) and residing at Liverpool, who duly entered his protest with me, the said Consul, against the Commander of the Confederate cruiser Florida, and against all others whom it doth or may concern; and, after having been sworn on the Holy Evangelists of Almighty God, the said EVAN EVANS did depose and declare as follows:

I left Liverpool on Monday, the 17th day of the present month, on board of the American sailing ship the Anglo-Saxon, of New-York, Capt. CAVERLY, of 868 tons burden, laden with coals, and bound from Liverpool to New-York. I was engaged to pilot the ship to off Queenstown, Ireland, where I was to be landed.

On the 21st inst., between 4 and 5 in the morning, being becalmed at about 25 miles S. S. E. of Queenstown, a steamer hove in sight, and very soon after sent a boat with an officer to us. Being the first who spoke to him, I asked the officer what ship it was. He replied a Confederate man-of-war. He made Capt. CAVERLEY go into his book, took the Anglo-Saxon's papers, and went back to the steamer. In about half an hour the same boat and officer, along with another officer, returned and ordered all hands to get their clothes ready, as they must leave the ship. During nearly two hours the steamer's men were occupied in carrying away all the stores, spars, and provisions, which they took in their own boat and in one of our boats to the steamer. They then set fire to the Anglo-Saxon and returned to the steamer, on reaching which I was told that she was the Confederate cruiser Florida. Capt. MAFFITT. They fired several guns into the Anglo-Saxon and made way to the southward. Shortly after they spoke an English ship, the Roger Ruball, as well as I could hear, bound to Quebec, and wanted to put their prisoners on board, but her Captain refused to take them.

Several vessels were seen, and it was evident to me that we were crossing the Channel and steering for the coast of France.

On Sunday morning, 23d inst., Ushant was in sight, and between 8 and 9 o'clock signal was made for a Pilot, but none came off. Steered for Brest Bay, where the Florida anchored off the town about noon. All the Anglo Saxon's crew, except the Captain and officers, had been kept in irons from the time of the capture until the ship was anchored in Brest Bay.

The Florida was put in quarantine, from which she was released yesterday evening, when the Anglo-Saxon's crew, twenty four in number, and myself, were landed and set adrift.

I have no reason to complain of the treatment which I received on board of the Florida; but I solemnly protest as a British subject against the captors for having taken me off my ground, detained me on board of the Florida, and landed me in a foreign country, instead of putting me on board of one of the many British ships bound up Channel which passed us, and one of which might have taken me to England.

In testimony whereof, the said appearer has hereunto subscribed his name, and I, the said Consul, have granted to the said EVAN EVANS, Pilot, this public instrument under my hand and seal of office, to serve and avail him and all others whom it doth, shall, or my concern, as need and occasion may require.

(Signed) EVAN EVANS. (Signed) A. PERRIER, Consul.

THE ALABAMA AND GEORGIA.

From the London News, Sept. 23.

Capt. GANDY, of the British ship Havelock from Bombay, makes the following report with reference to the Confederate steamer Alabama: On the night of the 4th July, 1863, a screw steamer under steam, brig rigged, passed the Havelock, steering eastward. On the morning of the 26th July, in lat. 15° 22' S., lon. 17° 0' E., observed a screw steamer under sail, rigged as a three-masted schooner; when near enough could distinguish the American ensign flying—did not hoist our ensign. During Divine service on board the Havelock a report of a gun was heard which alarmed us, when a shot fell across our bow. We then observed the Confederate flag flying on board the steamer. The Havelock was immediately hove to. We were then visited by a boat from the steamer with an officer, who said to us the steamer was the Confederate steamer Alabama, and he represented himself to be Lieut. EVANS; he told us they had on board 83 men and two American Consuls, which they would like us to take on board. Lieut. EVANS was then informed there was no room on board the Havelock for them. Instances of conversation with Capt. GANDY he said they had destroyed upwards of seventy American vessels during the last nine months, and that the steamer which passed the Havelock the night previous was the Confederate steamer Georgia, proceeding eastward. The Alabama supplied a British ship with two compasses on the 24th of July.

THE CASE OF MR. BELSHAW.

MR. BELSHAW, whose memorial to Lord RUSSELL we published a few days ago, has received the following reply:

FOREIGN OFFICE, Sept. 21, 1863.

SIR: I am directed by Earl RUSSELL to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th inst., giving an account of the ill treatment you experienced on your refusal to volunteer for service in the Confederate army, and requesting Her Majesty's Government to claim an indemnification for you on account of such ill-treatment.

I am to state to you in reply, that your claim shall not be lost sight of in case communications should be opened with the so-called Confederate authorities with a view to obtaining redress for British subjects who have suffered ill treatment in the Confederate States.

I am, Sir, your most obedient humble servant,

C. HAMMOND.

SHIP BUILDING FOR BELLIGERENTS.

The London Times, in its city article, devotes some space to this question, and exclaims against the designs of persons whose aim would appear not to promote but to prevent the exercise of neutrality. They make, it says, no demand that measures should be enforced for stopping the supply of munitions of war to the Northern States, nor to the enticing of British subjects from Ireland and elsewhere, to recruit the Northern armies. The Confederates may be shot down by English made cannon, but the Federals must not have their cotton and tea seized by English built ships. In matters of this sort the only safe plan must be to declare, that we are ready to build or make any instrument for which we can find customers to pay us, even a supply of Greek fire, if it should be wished for. Even the Federals themselves go so far in their pretensions, as some Englishmen are found to go for them; and only three weeks back the New York Journal of Commerce admitted that if England stopped the iron-clads, it would be only fair she should stop the supply of arms and ammunition to themselves. As to the argument that any international law to prevent vessels being built for a belligerent might, at a future time, prove highly beneficial to ourselves, all that can be said with regard to it is, that there will be time enough to consider it when the United States have signified their wish to change their present law, since there can be few who will suppose that if we now, without some guarantee, set an opposite precedent, that precedent will be held sacred in our favor, supposing at any time we should be at war with them. There would be no objection to a discussion of the whole matter in Parliament, where the paramount necessity of keeping open our trading rights and not allowing them to be sacrificed to suit the designs of a Government to avoid temporary disquietude, would be duly argued; but it is felt by many persons that these constant exhortations to the Ministry to stretch or override the actual law in anticipation of Parliamentary action, are likely to prove positively injurious, and also, that they bear an unpleasant resemblance to the views of the Federal politicians, who are ready utterly to disregard every point of their own Constitution on a phase of exigency.

THE MEXICAN QUESTION.

The Europe, of Frankfort, says that the Archduke MAXIMILIAN has finally accepted the Crown of Mexico at all risks and perils, and even renounces his rights and prerogatives as the nearest collateral Prince to the Austrian Crown.

The Morning Post's Paris correspondent is informed that JUAREZ has received assistance from the Government at Washington, in the shape of arms and powder, &c.; but that it is not the intention of the Federal Government to take any immediate steps which openly offend France.

The Archduke LOUIS, brother to the Archduke MAXIMILIAN, the Emperor designate of Mexico, is to marry the only child of the Emperor of Brazil.

The Times expresses regret that MIRAMON had been appointed by Gen. FOREY commander of the Mexican forces. MIRAMON is the person by whom the burglary was committed at the British Legation in 1861, when £110,000 in specie was stolen.

THE POLISH QUESTION.

A SIGNIFICANT PUBLICATION.

The Paris Moniteur had reproduced the letter from Warsaw, dated the 15th August, addressed by the Polish National Government to Prince CZARTORISKY, and already published by the English journals.

The Patrie says that this publication is a political event, a species of adoption of the reasoning of the authors of the memorandum, stating the recognition of the belligerent rights of the Poles as a just, logical, and generous act.

La France considers that the insertion of the Polish memorandum in the Moniteur has acquired the proportions of an event, and will produce a lively impression in Europe. The Temps thinks the insertion tantamount to moral recognition, the importance of which would be nullified were it not the precursor of the recognition of the Poles as belligerents.

The Pays and the Constitutionnel republish the document without comment.

Some of the English journals think that neither Russia nor the European Powers will be likely to overlook the above incident, which is something like unofficial recognition of the Polish National Government.

RUSSIAN WARLIKE PREPARATIONS.

The Paris Siècle points to the warlike preparations of Russia, and says:

"The dispatches of the Government of St. Petersburgh are warlike, and its acts are not less so. It parades its military preparations. At Helsingfors it tells the people of Finland that it relies upon them if the integrity of Russia should be menaced. After the orders bestowed on MOURAVIEFF, it rewards Vice-Admiral NOVOSSILSKI for his labor in superintending the fortifications of Cronstadt. New war vessels are to be constructed in Finland, where 20,000 troops are already stationed. Eleven plated and turreted gunboats will leave the dockyards of St. Petersburgh in the Spring. Lastly, on the banks of the Amour a body of troops, composed of BASKIRS, CAFFUCS and Chinese, is being formed, to be made use of, says the Breslau Gazette, against the French and English."

La France asserts that the Russian Minister of Marine had decided not to grant any leave of absence to the officers of the navy.

The London Times, in its city article, says that Exchange had recovered at St. Petersburgh to about par—that apprehensions of war had passed away, but that the Russian people were unanimous in their views on the Polish question.
